Taking drugs is a serious offense that carries a ten-year prison sentence and mandatory rehab. If you're caught dealing drugs, you will be hanged. The DUI is just a bonus.

Define harassing, because it entirely depends on what you mean by that. Violence and not letting them do their worship? Jail, damaging their temples? Fines and community service fixing what you damaged, just trying to convert them? Not a crime.

Tangatarehua does not have degrees of murder - it's all the same crime, and all murder convictions carry a mandatory penalty of life in prison.

This depends on the severity. If it results in financial gain for the offender, it can result in incarceration. Otherwise, it does technically carry a fine and community service.

A charge or two for public nuisance and/or hindering the operation of police, which could get you a heavy fine and community service.
