Hellion's Status: Empowering the People.

"President Johnson is decent guy, his childhood wasn't bad, his family was loving for the most part, and he served in the armed forces to safeguard the values of his country. Instead of just using the military as start to build a powerbase which is common in the Empire. Otherwise, his policies are forward moving and unifying to keep the people together and not falling into groups that identify in a particular way. However, I do disagree with cutting the salary of the Presidency. It's a most difficult job on the planet, you earn an adequate salary for the workload that judges the fate of the nation. In addition, while I'm not against the people owning firearms, I don't believe the citizenry

"Being honest here. I didn't read this Fat boy's biography. All I know here is that he would make a killer bid to be auctioned off like some animal to all his enemies he had made over the years or perhaps centuries? Anyways, his armour might fetch something nice on the market. Once I got it melted down and made it back into a solid bar. The design frankly just makes the worth fall down in price. Although based on other things I've heard, this triple seater could make for a good thug for hire. I got some folks that aren't paying their fair share to the Empi - the Treasury.

They live in some mountain compound and are greedily refusing to share the wealth with my organization that funds their protection. I need someone that is strong but cheap like this guy that can take care of them for me, the deal is I'll pay you front and back if you survive the job. And my good sir, all those things I said about selling you off to certain clients, gone! Never happened. If you be my tax collector, no, this isn't a choice, nor will your threats deter me. I could send my guys, but they are too expensive to risk losing so... You're the next best thing. He is vile, reeking of a spoiled upbringing, even if that was more so due to his own actions in life rather than his parents. Alas, I'd rather kick him to the curb myself and leave him there to realize that it's not all about control and business. Sometimes, you just need to take a risk and not care about profit! You are a good savage, loyal to your kin and the traditions of your people, strong against the outside world and willing to make hard choices. You gotta remember though, honor is one of the core things that separate four-legged beasts from savages and the civilized. There's certain codes to be followed and rites to be observed for the dead, not international ones like the Begeba Convention or whatever it's called, but ancient morals of one's own culture that prevent warriors from falling to darkness- unless you don't have those, in which case go wild."

So many potential connections lost because this so-called "friend" betrayed you, Horo. However, despite that Mein Kampf you persevered survived a civil war and became a political leader, established a strong network of slaves that will take arms when you give the call.

A fantastic tale of raising from the pit, and to the ivory tower where you now stand, you have my utmost respect and praise. Otherwise, this General Secretary pretends to be well-meaning, however, judging by his particular actions. He isn't afraid to sacrifice thousands to win the battle. I respect such a pragmatic mind morality comes last, when someone is standing in your way. But I can't say I agree with his support for the government involving itself in the affairs of the individual. The State is an antithesis to a truly free society, where the people have the liberty to do whatever they please without a nosey bureaucrat saying otherwise, and no less taxing them to Kingdom come. "If they don't move, they'll be crushed."

2023. It's a 3rd world war, and America and her friends rise from the ashes. In a horribly broken world, only one faction makes it out.

"The true enemy is still hiding in the shadows."

1986, Yuri's Epsilon Army is close to taking over the world, and a paramilitary organization tries to hold what's still free from his control.

"About Yunru, I, General Onox, find that she is wonderful. She fears the destruction of everything she has built up, yet in the process of averting it, has already destroyed much of what she has built.

I, General Onox, guess that her long march already destroyed her from the inside, only leaving a husk solely kept together by her hatred of this Yuri and it is certain that neither she nor her organisation is gonna outlive each other. Glorious by design, I, General Onox, would call that.

I, General Onox, would have little use for her, however, as she neither seems like a good opponent or something I could ally. If we were in the same world, I, General Onox, would just probably send complimentary letters for her organisation and their self-destruction.

May your reign continue on this path of Destruction,"

Then again, there's a reason why you are a general, so I can see and reason with that. "I, General Onox", to every time you mentioned yourself - you reminded me of one of the co-workers I have worked with in the labs. She does not use "I", like at all. Every single time I met her, she called herself "Dr. Brianna" without fail, it's quite an interesting quirk. It does not interfere too much, I will admit that, but sometimes, we have to do double takes because she would go, "Dr. Brianna needs to have lunch" and I have to go, "Wait, who? Oh." Anyway, for your raids and many other conquests you have done, I am not the one to judge, but I can only hope that you at least take care of those under your territory. Treat your subjects well, is what I'm saying. We will see each other again, probably.
