"I apologize if I was rude the last time I was sharing my opinion of Valentjin, Clarissa. I should've known better than to be so blunt in my assessment of your dear friend. It's just it seems like my mind decided to somehow be extremely cynical about your nature. Who knows what voices are in my mind?"

Just know that I still admire you! However, I'll be polite and honest with you. It has come to my attention that sometimes, pacifism can cause more harm than good when you ignore people to turn into monsters. I'm sure you know how difficult it is to stay true to your ideals while also simultaneously making sure that your citizens are kept safe from the claws of opportunistic, manipulative men and women. I'm not going to name anyone in particular but the fact is that it seems to be very difficult for me to stay true to my ideals in the face of adversity.

Still, it's always inspiring to see you and your cabinet always put a smile on your face even when you're facing abhorrent individuals that have no regard for the lives of others. Maybe you smile because you want to trick the fear inside of you? Have you ever thought about? However, while it's nice for you to dream of a world where war is a last resort and compassion is present in everyone, you also have to consider what's realistic. In any case, I hope you have a wonderful day and don't worry, just because I'm questioning my own values doesn't mean I'll turn into some kind of monster. I'll still be same ol' me hopefully!"

I'm still very concerned with these accusations. Political assassination? While I believe in the legal principle known as the presumption of innocence, the fact that you've been accused of such crimes means that you've foolishly made some great enemies or you're a despicable man that simply isn't fit for office and ought to be kicked out by force. Regardless, it's a crime you should clear yourself off of or simply admit to it. Nothing grinds my gears more than a public servant that isn't held accountable for their crimes." - Ambrosia

The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. I won't reprimand her because she is right, though she could have worded that a little nicer. To maintain one's composure and attitude throughout such hardships is admirable to the extreme. Changed in body, but not in attitude. How exactly he survived a direct nuclear impact is beyond me, but that too is worthy of commendation. I hope that my following opinion after reading your leader dispatch changes a little bit your vision of me, the marshall.

Myths have always been something rather important in my life, most of them are just that, myths, but the myth of the Mother Nature is apparently much more deep and complex. Klarissa, the Mother Nature, looks like a wise person whose life has been changing constantly, but her personality has been important on shaping her aspirations. Her history is also interesting, I didn't expect her to live the Cold War, neither to terraform the old world, but the fact is that the last part surprised me less than the previous one, even if it is the more mystical.

Cyan, the other myth, I guess, is probably my favourite due to the fact that she represents the love for cats, so she kind of represents Hamilton in a way.

Anna is much misterious for me, I thought she would be much smaller, but she is taler than me! Ok, now about the opinion, I am confused about the part of her trying to destroy the Earth, but I won't take that in mind too much. She represents joy, and she is kind of futuristic, with an interesting knowledge of solar-punk. I still think that steam-punk is better but both are cool. And finally, I didn't expect her to have fears, even that fearing heights is common, I didn't expect that in a magical creature that represents happiness.

Ok, and what can be all of this summarized to? I really don't know it is very confusing all of this info, but judging by how the nation has developed, by the information shown on their factbooks, and by the impressive nature that they show in the beautifully created factbooks about it, and specially judging them by how population rised soon after the foundation of Valentine Z in 2004-2005, I can say that they have made a great job, and that is something I higly respect.
