There would be no punishment for owning the saw and not taking action, then taking action is a different story however, and they'd likely be forced to either spend a year or two in prison or fix the house themselves.

Either a life sentence of solitary confinement or 500 lashes, depending on the mood of the police forces that caught the culprit.

Extreme mismanagement agricultural funds by local officials which then resulted in widespread, violent farmer revolts.

"Being a" anything isn't really a crime here. Assuming that the meat is ethically sourced from a sapient that consented to posthumous consumption, eating sapient-sourced meat is not a crime. However, it's unlawful to sell or commercially prepare meat that isn't AFDA approved, and AFDA doesn't approve any meat from a sapient source.

Owning a handgun isn't illegal anywhere in America. A fine and dispossession of the weapon, temporarily if it is carried in gun-free zones in some cities, permanently if the carrier is barred from the right to bear arms.
