"There's not much to say on this Hans fellow. He's very adamant about leading his nation and doing what's good for his people. Modernization is good, keeps you grounded for the future. There seems to be something sinister about him, however. It's not like I can fault him for that though. Still, I would be as cautious as I could around him and will therefore keep a neutral stance towards him."

"Alright, so- no, no, this won't do."

"That's better. A box is better than nothing. Ah, well, on to the subject at hand. You, 'Holy Leader', are a prime example of why kings fail. What do I mean? Well, monarchy, you see, isn't inherently to me a negative mode of governance, but unrestrained monarchy is. The prevailing notion among my people has been that an absolute ruler such as yourself can only rule well when made accountable to the people, lest they descend into overindulgence and pillage their own nation. Now, we do not do so in the way, say, those Caleshan do it- they waste good talent on the regular with their... defenestrations. No, what I mean is that a monarch must be held accountable to those wiser than them, their elders, or must speak for the people. Among my folk, we do not have a monarch, and we do not want one. My father, honor unto him, recognized the scope of his goals required some centralization of power, and as he told me the Council presented a means for him to do that. So I, as Caller, present to the Council the people's ills, they deliberate- and take forever doing so, might I add- and I execute their will, if need be, according to my judgement. Thus we are set against each other, and given reason to work together. But you? You think you are kind because you have acted to barely curb the rapacity of your forefathers. You gas and you kill your own people for groaning at the burden you place on them. If you were wise then you would listen to them and judge their complaints evenly, not dismiss them out of hand. You are an utter fool. But I can expect no less from your kind. I have given you counsel, and your fate is now clear. Ignore me if you must. But when your people mount your head on a pike you should not be surprised."

-The Caller is not impressed. Then again, she never is, unless you bribe her with great quantities of tea.

"Mm, yes, b o x. It is a nice box.

Anyways, you. Twins. I have spoken on you before. I think I will give you honest counsel now instead. So, I have been told that you two have met with the Chairwoman. I must say, I did not expect such a thing to ever happen. You seemed too opposed for such an exchange to ever go well. But you are more similar than you think. The difference, perhaps, is that the two of you came from a place of victory taken from defeat, whereas the Chairwoman is a victorious conqueror. She can afford to deliver to her people lavishes and kindnesses as a result. But you two have nothing to fear from your world. Why act as if you do? You quite literally have a- ugh, please get it away- immensely powerful magical creature with literal agents of hell as its lapdogs. You reign supreme. You can afford to act as if you are at peace. Your war is over. Rest in your victory while you may."

-Still trying out this format, might get rid of the color. I don't think it necessarily fits.

Supercomputer Tom
Opinion on the Lev
Status: Not Classified, for public's eye, if necessary

So he is in a charge of an ex-soviet country... In that case, his surprisingly chubby altitude with Russia is certainly an oddity, because based on intel I knew about his timeline's Russia and our timeline's Russian Empire, Russia's neighbors either have a distrust or fear, or are allies which are slowly trying to drift away. Some soldiers stationed in the Rutheno-Ukrainian region heard stories from the locals of just how bastardly the Empire's rule was, even in comparison to the chaos era. Now, to his personal character.

Huh, working on a fish vessel in Arctic seems to be a some sort of popular work for Tarvelians before they can legally work? Got to work only two years on the vessel before the whole big union collapsed, and three years later his conscription letter arrived. This probably gives him some insight about animal world, and perhaps made more environmentalist. Your family is patriotic, sure, but how much of an use the empty patriotism is - I am not so sure. Overall, my altitude is mixed with heavy strokes of ambiguity and not-exactly positiveness.

When it comes to politics, I am going to look purely at his stats this time, and not by what he has enacted or supported in words. Yeah, you are religious and devout to your version of god, alright. His authoritarian side also quite sticks around, and is the bane of opposition in his country. In everything else, he is unfortunately a pitiful moderate, even in conservatism in which he champions himself as an one. Overall, not much else to say about him, other than that he is the typical politician, and would use populism in his favor, yet do something else in office.

And of course, you have to keep a certain personality mask in your office as a leader, even if it isn't your full character in reality. What he said about journalists... Yeah, they need some self-restraint and more, if you know what I mean. As for his laugh, it probably sucks that it comes off as sarcastic, yet is actually his real laugh.

"One time, maybe twenty to twenty-five starsigns ago, there was a tribe that chose to rely upon a cogitator of some advancement in lieu of a Cala. Things went well for them, for a while. The system finally showed its flaws when it had difficulty accounting for the sheer volume of variables that interact in Caleshan politics. They play into each other, you see, and if you focus too much on who owes what to whom you swiftly descend into madness. Even we do not go so deep. The poor thing fell into a recursive feedback loop and threw itself out a window. How simple your people must be, that you are adequate to administer it. Based on how you administer it, I understand now why it was well that MUNIN took wing the way it did. You are a flawed construct, administering a flawed system." -Cala Vermuth Iron Tiger

Anyway, seems like her xenophobic attitude is because of past experiences, which is understandable, but that also includes those who are actually genuine with wanting to help. i guess the exception of those who benefit the swarm in some way could be seen as a gateway to such. nevertheless, she is extremely devoted to her cause just as much as i am devoted to my own personal projects, which i can admire her for... i guess if i was to ever get in this queen's good books, itll have to be something that will benefit her, and at the very least, come at no cost to me. i guess in time i will think of something, but for now, i will keep things neutral... maybe her daughter Ki'kik would be a good first step to working something out..."

His Majesty, the King of New Carthagea

Europe's Most Handsome!

"Hello, Pyotr. It was nice to know more about you. I knew your paternal grandparents Kazimir and Feodora, they were quite the wonderful couple. About you, Margaret has said you're quite the handsome chap, and I must admit, you really are. I admire that you, too, have chosen serving the armed forces as your line of duty; a man can learn more than serving in the forces than he ever can anywhere else in his life.

I also see that you have a degree in Physics, another commonality between us two! Physics is indeed a beautiful subject, and I like that we share a common academic interest. I have heard you had quite the troubling and edgy teenage years, but we all grow up, and so have you. Feodora and Kazimir would be very proud of you, my son. God bless you.

I heard quite a lot about you! Your days of anti-terrorist activities and operations, to getting married, and two children. Quite a remarkable string of feats and events. Fascinating that you are particularly interested in Physics and Mathematics, you should definitely talk to Jamie some time. Shame that you don't have the likes for Literature and Biology, though still, people have differing likes and dislikes, so that is understandable. Besides, don't suppose that your dislike might have come from all the rote memory stuff that most schools rely on? Seriously, that is the pain in the arse, and I can agree if you are forced to memorise everything. That is not learning or testing your understanding - that is "Who has the most reliable memory". Anyway, I am positive on you.

"Ah another Valentian. He seems to be quite an influential and powerful man, seems to be the brains of Valentine Z. Surely there is much our people can learn from him especially in the field of science. I notice he is not a man of politics yet he has done great services for his nation and he is truly commendable. Like the other Valentians, I see him as a valued friend"

Official Judgement of The Overseers:

"We have witnessed the godlessness incited by communism and will not hesitate to show this Beatrix filth what happens to her heretic kind. Revolutionaries like her must be drawn and quartered publicly in order to save humanity from descent into the pits of hell. The fact that she even got power, violating her gender role, only further proves our point of eradicating modernity."

The Tilminese Federation is a totalitarian fascist theocracy ruled with an iron fist by The Overseers, a fanatical organization of theocratic fundamentalists seeking to eradicate 'modern degeneracy'. Has scenic architecture, no light pollution, quiet streets and public executions for the smallest crimes. Oh and one in every four Tilminese has died from starvation, disease, execution, forced labor, and genocide ever since the Overseers have taken power but that's not too important.

"You do realise that modernity is subjective, right? Medieval times were modern once. By choosing a certain point in history you haven't eradicated modernity, you've simply changed what it means. So you've basically failed to do anything but pick a random point in time and keep everyone under your control there for no reason. Well done."

"We do commend his efforts in trying to reconstruct his nation's economy after its collapse we must say that his policy would be far better if he were to centralize and consolidate his rule. However even barring that we see Wilkins is a good enough leader. He may be a Republican, but his style of governance is agreeable enough that we can look past his inefficiencies. Our opinion is positive."
