Depends on how powerful the Meth Empire is. If it's just another drug lord, probably life in prison or "suicide" if they're too successful. But if its Pablo Escobar level, "exile" to an island resort.

Stealing something in a shop right that happens to be in a federal/governmental building?

Definitely not an eye for an eye. Most likely, up to a few months in prison and a week or two of day-fines (basically, how much you make in a day times the number of days) including the public intoxication charges that are probably involved.

Like depends on if it happens. If nothing happens, up to 5 years imprisonment. If it ends up being genocide, life imprisonment.

AN has no crime, so El it is.

It's a somewhat complicated question. First off, a gun like it wouldn't be considered a self-defense or sporting firearm (Classes 3 and 4), since the phrasing implies personal ownership, public and commercial purposes (Class 1) are probably out of the question. Class 2 firearms can only be obtained as military/police surplus or registered domestic products, of which the PP-19 Bizon is neither, so it cannot be legally obtained for personal use in El Lazaro. Since illegally imported weapons are also unlicensed, possessing one in another crime in itself. Finally, if you were arrested because you were carrying an (unlicensed) Class 2 firearm in public, unapproved usage and storage of Class 2 firearms is another crime. Worse, if you smuggled the weapon yourself across borders, you're guilty of arms trafficking.

A maximum of 15-40 years and $15000-70000 in fines. You can get your hands on submachine guns without excessive difficulty, but the person in question has made a lot of poor choices by doing so illegally.

Kidnapping your nations leader here and demanding a ransom of 100 Million of whatever your currency is.

A Small City-State inbetween France and Italy, Castellar is ruled by a Royal family, it's only a few miles in size and has a small population, the country is very economically rich and is a member of the UN, and NATO, as well as being one of the leading members of the EU.
