Ninja'd

AAN: No highways in my nation. Nonetheless: driving around a tank when not in the military will result in the tank being impounded, the driver receiving a very stern talking-to, and their community being notified. If there is damage to the road, that community is expected (even if not legally required) to help repair this.

If the tank was not stolen from the army (which in the case of a T72, it wouldn't), there won't be any further repercussions. If the tank WAS stolen, the driver would be taken in for a hearing, and probably, mediation.

AN: Definitely mediation. Also, you would be milked for every single drop of information and knowledge that you have.

Mediation? Is that a code word for something, or are you implying they just get sent to a guidance counselor?

Depends on local ordinances. There is no national law governing this.

Depends, it's export smuggling, punishable with 15 years in prison, but if it's export smuggling, not a crime.

AN: I think u messed up bro you got ninja'd anyways
Punishable by prison time, depending on severity, if its genuinely a lighthearted prank, you got yourself a job in the cyber warfare division.

AAN: Deception is a general crime if anything ends up stolen, as described in section 22 of Article 128 of the STRATOS Code of Conduct, as stated "When someone uses deception, any consent that was given to take the property in question becomes invalid. As such, the deceiver can be charged with and convicted of theft"
