There's many different ways to cannibalize a living being for computer components, more specifically using DNA as storage space.

A heavily Touhou-inspired nation. I'd rather not use NS Stats if it can be avoided.

They are based in the southeastern United States, were founded amidst a balkanization of America, Their leader/ Founder was only 15 when he conceptualized the Nation, and in their world the North is ruled by a thinly-veiled Trump stand-in who had crowned himself High King of America.

Albennia was formed supposedly by the normal marriage of different parties for alliances, eventually becoming a monarchy after a ritual involving poles and mistreated birds.

Surprisingly enough, the country -well, realm- is classified as a Military Junta despite the fact that -being a feudal realm in a post-apocalyptic historical setting- it lacks a standing military and the largest number of forces it can field in a military situation without just falling apart is... 376 men.

They fought a 'civil war' over Alcohol at one point in time. And about the only 'casualty'- (besides all the Alcohol)... was Dandi getting a slap in the face.

The 'Brothers War' as it was known was actually a fairly short affair- Taking 7 weeks, as trains allowed for a rapid mobilization, telegraphs for rapid communication, along with new breech loading rifles. I suppose in this way, you could the 'Brothers War' the first modern European war- Which is rather interesting to think about how another major European war would change doctrines for WWI.

Somehow, the Brisian Union is able to overcome human nature and ensure that people are civil when discussing politics and they also seem to be rather dishonest when it comes to their ideology. They preach for peace and diplomacy but have no qualms with taking the universe by the way of the sword. What unknown war would justify the annexation of the universe? I wonder 🤔

That Albennia has both multi-member and single-member constituencies within its unicameral legislature. Multi-member constituencies elect their representatives through a single non-transferable vote system (though why they use SNTV instead of STV is beyond me), whereas those in single-member constituencies elect their representative using a simple first-past-the-post system.
