Not a crime. The state doesn't control the church, if someone wants to be ordained in exchange for money, they can go right ahead.

Blasphemy, but not against the state church or, at the absence of one, majority religion.

As the Army is apolitical, the promotion of any ideology is grounds for removal from service and may also lead to one's rank and benefits stripped from them.

DUI and Hit-and-Run?

Drunk driving: 40 lashes and driving ban for an unlimited amount of time.

Manslaughter: financial compensation.

Obstruction of justice: 5 years imprisonment in this case.

Travis Bickle-style social cleansing.

I suppose I'll have to revive the thread, won't I?

Anyway, murder is murder. Thus, the individual would be charged with several counts of murder and sentenced to life. It's possible for the individual to be eligible for early release after serving a minimum term set by the judge (called a deemer if male, deemester if female, in Inglisc); the Crown may also grant an individual pardon, but this is solely at HM's pleasure.

Conspiracy to commit murder.

I guess with TPing, you mean teleporting?

Since it hasn't happened yet that a house would vanish in an instant, and even though the fact that the perpetrator would be hard to identify, our jurisdiction would make charges of Vandalism and Theft. The punishment would be a sentence of 5 years of mandatory servitude to the Feudal Cantons. In case of further criminal activities past conviction, a public execution will be mandated.

Not a crime, no punishment.

Shoplifting a small, inexpensive item.

(AN, I believe "TP" meant "toilet paper" as in "cover with toilet paper as an act of vandalism")

Punishment for shoplifting a relatively inexpensive product is no more than a few hours of community service, as well as a fine paid to the owner of the business for the price of the product stolen as well as the return of the stolen item to the vendor.

What is BN's punishment for perjury?

Complicated question.

By law the government has no right to do such a thing, people have a right to privacy in Andronya, so the government itself is the one committing a crime here, and obviously, bringing this information to the public eye is not a crime either, the people responsible for the program could easily be sentenced to death or even be lynched over such a breach of a core Andronyan principle.

HOWEVER, a government that is willing to undergo such a program I am convinced would never hesitate to murder someone, even if he committed no crime so... no legal punishment, but the person that leaked it would more than likely get... "suicided".
