You'd have to pay a rather steep fine.

Illegally entering your country, but ending up as a key political ally to your government?

Officially 25 to life in prison depending on the specific case and the severity of said case... however cases of extrajudicial violence are often overlooked regarding this topic

Possessing an illegally firearm (whether through outright prohibition, legislation regarding classification, questionable acquisition, etc.)

Murder is a crime. If it is murder -as defined by law- it could be anywhere from "5 years in prison" [the lightest punishment for heat of passion murder] to "life in prison", a public hanging or other forms of execution depending on the state.

Depends on type of robbery. Armed robbery warrants death by experimentation/forced labor, unarmed also this but rarely the judge will instead relegate forced labor camps in colonies of up to 30 years. No one cares if the perpetrator has left the money behind.

Sexual abuse of most kinds can carry the death penalty in Andronya, ESPECIALLY if done against children. On top of that there is human trafficking, which can easily put you in prison for up to 50 years. The bottom line is that depending on the severity you can go from living the rest of your life in prison to not living at all.

Accidental manslaughter (and also admitting to guilt both in public during interrogation and in court).

Varies from state to state, but typically it includes a prison sentences of five to ten years, a fine up to $100,000 and (depending on the state) mandatory counseling sessions.

It's a pretty common occurrence in the eastern departments, especially in Morcyereunia. Anyways the punishment would be the same for arson (5 months), however if there were injuries or even deaths, then it becomes either attempted murder or first degree murder, which are 25 to life in prison depending on the severity of the specific case.

A crime, defined as “sexual actions dishonoring the nation”, falling in the same category as bestiality and adultery and punishable by forced psychiatric treatment, heavy fines and unreclaimanle loss of all parental rights. If repeated offense Corporal punishments may be administered.

Police brutally dispersing a protest? (Not a crime here)

If a policeman takes an violent action that is not commanded by a superior, they would be held personally liable to it just like any other person using force without justification. The jobs are not a defence for something they undertake out of a personal initiative. If it is commanded by a superior, the officers in the chain of command would be placed on leave and be prosecuted for inciting violence against members of the public who were implicitly free to protest and assemble.

That is an instance of murder, nothing more or less. The punishment is from 5 years to life in prison, at the discretion of the court.

Towing and a fine of ~20 bucks, nothing less.

Because AN double posted will also do AAN:

Murder, no one cares about the reasoning in this case, up to 10 years in prison or heavy corporal punishment (has ~75% mortality and 95% disability rate just saying).
