Depends on the intent, if a act of terror expect harsh sentencing under the The Calva Anti-Terrorism Act (CATA) 1980
Punishments can range from Death, Life Imprisonment or even being turned in to a human drone for a supercomputer very much in the style of the drones from the Hyron Project from Deus Ex Human Revolution

If the convicted person has no Pyrotechnic license, a $1000 fine and a warning would be issues.

Repeating such crime will eventually lead up to jail (jailtime is debated in court)

Given that nobody is harmed/killed, it's up to 30 years in prison, depends on how much you steal.

Forcing someone to eat an extremely mouldy slice of cheese (the victim is not allergic to dairy).

That would hardly be a crime, and heavily matured stink-cheese is considered a delicacy around here so... it's likely the "victim" would do it voluntarily.

Execution, usually humane, being gutted and disemboweled alive is also a possibility

If you're not in a cartel, it's death by firing squad. If you're in a cartel, perfectly legal, or at least decriminalized.

Hazing.

You have to clean off the symbols, then mandatory therapy to find out what made you do it, then education, lots of education. During your time in 'prison', if you can even call it a prison, you can do community service, which is also how the 'prisons' are funded, which is why your therapy workbook is 20 years old and has penises scribbled in the margins.

That is, if anyone ever happened to commit a crime at all... we haven't had that problem in years. I think some guy was speeding a couple years ago because he was excited to get home to see his husband, but that's about it.

Speaking out against the government.

EDIT: This was supposed to be a reply to Kaywell's comment, but someone else posted it before I could... sorry.

AAN: Death penalty, but since the perpetrator(s) is a higher-up in a likely large corporation, they'll probably get away with it.

AN: 20000 lashes from zeruel strips followed by execution by firing squad.

It depends on the context. If their are being peaceful about it, it is not a crime. But if their are actively trying to dissuade from communist views, 5 years in Alaska
