I wonder if Luveria would like Death Grips, since they're like harsh hip-hop that verges on even some metal feeling to them.

I see industrial and punk as influences according to Wikipedia

Explain what this is? I need answers! It's like "wow this is good, but I have no idea what it is or what's it about, the theme or why the musical style, and how that relates to the lyrics. I wish to learn. □"

<http://rapgenius.com/Nas-patience-sabali-lyrics>

^This'll break down and explain the lyrics (this site is a necessity for some of the stuff I gave you, particularly Lupe).

I'll try to explain the video itself as best I can, but I have a cold and it's making me a little loopy, so some of what I say may not be coherent. ☐

As far as the video itself, this is my understanding:

The video is African themed, and in particular Egyptian. The connection for Damian is that he is a Rasta. Rastas embrace their identity as African and hold Africa in great regard. Africa is where the first humans evolved, the foundations of human civilization arose originally in Africa. Some of the theology of the major Abrahamic religions (Christianity, Islam, Judaism) are said to have been derived from traditional African and Egyptian spirituality. But in modern days, none of this is appreciated, and Africa is exploited. It seems to me that Damian is trying to point out this fact.

How the video's theme connects to Nas...I'm not sure. I don't know enough about him to say.

The musical style is basically a blend of both of their styles: Nas does hip-hop, and Damian does reggae/reggae-fusion. I should also point out that reggae is heavily Rastafari themed and usually expresses messages about Africa and African people, in the land and in the Diaspora.

I don't know, I still don't have a solid understanding of the video, but that's how I've understood it so far.

EDIT: Reading through the lyrics in the link I gave you, the explanation of the lyrics shed light on the theme of the music video.

Now it makes more sense. ☐

And the video is great. The way the vocals are done carries out such emotion.

listens to the song again
