"Far from being a dictator or petty tyrant, Howard C. Scott is a great man. He is certainly not without flaws and skeletons in the closet, for instance his rigging of the American elections and connection with the mafia. He still strikes me as a man of unparalleled competence and vision. The basis of his leadership, of technocracy, is extremely appealing, and after reading about it, I believe our ancestors could have taken a lesson from this man. Had we adopted technocracy instead of Marxism in our early history, we might have avoided our initial economic troubles. Indeed, only adopting some degree of technocratic principles under Finnegan Reed did we ever achieve prosperity. Looking back on history, I think Howard C. Scott would have made a better leader for our nation than Ellir, had he been there to govern it. Well, that's all in the past now, there's no point in speculating about how it could have been changed.

Howard C. Scott industrialized his nation, he has brought stability and wealth to the entire North American continent, and he has made his nation a strong, influential power in the world. He has expanded his nation's borders for the just cause of economic self-sufficiency, which makes nations free and invulnerable to sanctions or economic attacks by foreign powers. He comes from a background of experience as a civil engineer. He understands the principle that band-aids do not fix deeply rooted problems. I do not sense hypocrisy or corruption in him, at least not unless it's a means to a just end. I do not like the reduction of freedom in where people can work, but that alone isn't enough to dislike him. My overall opinion of this man is very positive."

General Tansagar: I'll be waiting for your marriage proposal to me. We are meant to be together.

Kaoma Haishi: Right... Anyway when I look at your style of leadership. I see Inogo Estima. No shit I really do. From the aggressive words to other countries, to the combination of freedom, socialism, and nationalism. You're just Inogo with a fancy beard and 2 decades of age. Your strong willed dedication to save your country from foreign powers and to build the military is admirable, I know war is bad and should be avoided at all costs but you can't be sure that others will say the same thing.

Inogo Estima: Dear general, I think it's not a good idea to express your deviance to a conservative leader. Anyway, I think the only thing I disagree with you is the whole conscription part. I believe that conscription is not that different from slavery. But hey, if the situation demands it then so be it. I rather be enslaved by the army for a few years than to be enslaved by a foreign aggressor. You also need to get your paranoia in check, paranoia often causes death. But hey, we can do some weapons/combat training together if you want to. Or you can do it with the general if you're willing to take the risk.

Well, you for sure are an interesting fellow, for starters, having to actually fight for your legitimate right to govern over your people- something I'd really wish Alexandria would do... I can only laud you being ready to put everything to the stake in order to avenge the dishonorable and shameful acts that the usurper has displayed- not only this but being ready to sacrifice a lot for the good of ones folk is not just honorable- but something many rulers, be it democratically elected, appointed or inherited forget. May I only wish for your rule to be prolonged and plentiful, Duke!

If you ever have some communists in Laka that need getting rid of, Your Highness, let me know. My daughter's division has had a hankering for some target practice. As for you, Field Marshall Ludendorff, do you happen to have an Erich in your family -- a general in a certain world war, best friends with a guy named Hindenburg? Statement on the French Head of State Jean-Andou Flaubert

Polish People's Republic
Jeszcze Polska nie zginęła!

A woman who on the surface would have probably been somewhat respectable has been ruined by her insane adherence to what I am only assuming is the inevitable result of the lack of treatment for mental illness in France and the despicable nature of the fascists to ruin the minds of human beings. I see no reasons why Ms. Flaubert should be outside of a mental institution, let alone as the head of state and a political figure. It is highly unfortunate that her mental state was destroyed by the horrors of the fascist occupation, after one loses their family it can be hard to recover from the strife that such a thing would cause. However, Flaubert's method of dealing with her loss has proven to me that she has lost the traces of her humanity, having been stripped to only her core survival instincts when faced with the threat of extermination under the jackboot of German fascism. Had she been able to recover instead of descending into her current delirium, she could have been a great woman and an example of a proletarian hero fighting back against the despicable fascist hordes. While my own grandfather had fought during the war against the Germans (both in the initial invasion and as part of the Soviet organized army of Zygmunt Berling), he never saw anywhere near as much loss as Jean-Andou Flaubert did. She has my sympathy for her losses, but unfortunately that does not exempt her from my judgement.

Flaubert should not have been put anywhere near a position of power after the liberation of France, it is concerning that she was even allowed to become an influential figure within her own resistance organization. Aside from being utterly insane, she puts France on a collision course for self-destruction under her schizophrenically driven ideology of 'accelerationism'. She sees herself as the architect of a new human cognition, of a new way of seeing the world, as a metaphysician. These are not the positions of a Marxist despite her alignment to communism. Her beliefs would seek to erode dialectical and historical materialism from the minds of the French proletariat, and leave them blind to the development of class struggle and the trends of the development of world history and the development of capitalism. I hope that the influence of the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic eventually leads to the French replacing her with someone far more capable, although with the current state of their communist movement and the rise of this 'Eurocommunism' (of which I am heavily uninformed but have a bad feeling about), I don't know if this will happen or is possible within the confines of their current situation.

To say that I am concerned for the future of France and the global proletarian movement is an understatement. I can only hope that those communists who are still loyal to Marxism-Leninism eventually correct the deviations within France, lest the situation spiral into a potential collapse of ruling authority under this 'moral-less' system of Flaubert's creation. The Polish United Workers' Party can only continue to advocate for the replacement of Jean-Andou, but whether this actually happens is up to the determination and will of the French Marxist-Leninists.

The Supreme Leader, Zevqir

Ok, so what is this?! I need to give my opinion to other leaders? Well, sure I can probably do that. Who do we have here? Some disgusting alien called Romran Kor. What kind of name is that? The last name sounds kind of Scalmarish, that means that you stole it from us, just like how you stole all of our technology after your forefathers murdered our glorious gods and brought down glorious Ultra-Galactica. So I read here that you were a military officer of the Polish People's Republic who supported a military coup. That sounds similar to how I took power. Did you stole that too?! Also I'm reading here something about a Second Carrington Event. I don't know what that is, but I'm assuming that it must be very damaging to your planet.

Actually now that I'm reading further about your piece of land, a Carrington Event sounds like a massive solar flare, you sure it wasn't your sun? But maybe I'm expecting too much intelligence for an alien. So eventually the army decided to make you a leader because the person you supported for your coup got too old and wanted to retire.

The leadership got just handed over to you? You call yourself a military officer and you didn't even fight in a war. I climbed to the top in a fight against an alien menace. But maybe I'm expecting too much bravery from a bunch of cowardly aliens like you.

Now let's go to your beliefs. Apparently you are a 'socialist'. I don't know what socialism is, but since it's probably thought up by your people, I don't have a lot of faith in it. Wait a minute? Now I see something about a 'communist movement.' Is communism another name of socialism? Why are you so inconsistent about the name of your beliefs. Socialist economy? Don't you know that economics is a fake science made up by aliens to weaken the Scapmar. But that is probably what you want to do. I think that I've seen enough of you. Goodbye.

Daikan: Hey you have 4 legs, I have 4 legs, lets be friends! Wait you want to kill me with a hammer? How about I tear all 6 of your flimsy limbs with my horns? Nah i'm not interested in you anymore bye.

Inogo Estime: I always thought of religion as 2 things. A path for you to connect with a greater being, giving you peace and happiness in face of all the shit the world throws at you or a fire that can be used to burn the heretics or to forge a better future. You have misused your faith to satisfy your xenophobia and craving for power. No wonder your karma is down the toilet and so is your death cult. Even your followers hate you, that should be concerning. Balance is a virtue and being obsessive in your religion, no matter how benevolent you think it is not a virtue. However this is not all your fault, conscription can break a man which is why as I've said before, conscription is just honorable slavery. It really does show how a flawed system can spiral into that. What's even worse is that you're doing this in the hopes that you can retain glory, not because your religion says do it or you go to hell. This isn't about salvation, it's just textbook imperialism. Bloody hell.

Daikan.. don't kill him, just let divine intervention and bad karma and poor Hiyudo (chakra) well being either bring him back to the right path or finish him off. Who knows what kind of alien diseases is inside him

You know what "Mysterious" is a synonym off? Completely irrelevant. Ehehehehe, Seriously, it doesn't even matter who he is supposed to be, since he seems just some random idiot with anger issues and a small manhood, who even the creator wasn't interested enough in to give him a proper character, nor to actually write him and instead seems to have hoped for validation of his shallow egotrip with a character that is probably a self-insert. I guess, hihhihi, he is one of the people that wants you to think that they are secretly dangerous badasses, but I will tell you a secret. They really are not.

/still Zeloria or Sherechia if their post is done

I made it anonymous and mysterious on purpose.

Carl's Mood: Professional

"Minister Haishi, I've honestly been looking forward to expressing my professional admiration towards her for a while now. I don't want to come off as some corporate blowhard, but Kaoma possesses a lot of skills that I look for in a manager. (Laughs lightly) I mean, I'm obviously not saying that federal legislation bears similarity to retail management, but Kaoma is clearly a born leader, and a natural strategist; and if you ask me, those are the sort of timeless attributes that shine regardless of the industry in question. She delivers a certain no-nonsense approach that I look for in all my new-hires, and I'm glad to see that she's putting her skills to such noble use, i.e. public transportation. In fact, her professional motto says it all. All of us in management, leadership - whatever you want to call it - possess an obligation to our people. An obligation to remove obstacles. And I can tell that this is exactly what Minister Haishi was trying to get across when she made this statement."

"Her work ethic alone...now that is something that I respect. Hell, I was a B student too, for the most part at least, but when appearances are nine-tenths of the law, a good student with a great sense of workmanship will upstage a great student with lazy workmanship any day of the week. It is without a doubt the single-most palpable reason behind her rapid advancement through the ranks of the private rail industry. I mean, a 147% increase in a live, volume-based efficiency metric over the course of three years? I'd sure as heck promote her too! The steaming cherry on top? The one nation, one card program. Some say it's just a convenient consolidation tactic, but as a former business student, this was probably revolutionary for her nation's transportation sector at the time. Bravo."
