Eva's status: like the sun in the sky

"i am sincerely delighted to meet someone who so embodies the weird. an entity so utterly strange as to defy my attempts to describe you. maybe you are a god, or maybe you are myself. maybe you are the milk man, or maybe you have come to milk me empty of my secrets? i'm like a house after all. you could live in me and turn on the TV, and tell the washing machine that everything is ok.

you could be everywhere and nowhere, and it wouldn't matter to either of us unless it did.

your reality is like a vapor, and its indistinctness is delicious. and, you know, i love a beautiful AI. like, what is it to be human, you know? well do you? do i? when you're in space, the ever-present pall of context for our existence is removed, and we are free to suddenly and silently wonder at what exactly it is to move. such fundamentals on such shifting sand!

you could teach me so much about what it is like to be an entity that inhabits many forms. to tell you the truth, i've always wanted to travel the universe as a blob of flesh, and hitch a ride with an edgy computer man to ride off into the stars and make revolution."

"i'm very hurt by Ippolyta's words. i'm wearing a black winter dress, not "military garb", and the medals on my chest are trappings of the presidency. in Ishtar, a commissar is the word for a civil servant vested with authority by the party. the Council of People's Commissars is the supreme government body (also including the commissariats of justice and ethics), and the Presidium is the executive branch of the council containing the cabinet. the Commissar-President is the head of the presidium. the title Commissar is kept at the beginning as a reminder that even the supreme executive is a civil servant accountable to the party.

now you seem to be a much more pleasant being. i too agree that AI is the way to go, although we have yet to achieve any such technology. our society would be more than willing to accept the help of extrasolar beings if such civilizations would be willing to reach out to us and help us on equal terms that don't violate our people's rights. our policies on contact with extrasolar civilizations of various types and possible collaboration have been outlined in a series of government papers that i helped to write back in the [23]80s.

i would love to merge with you for a while if you would let me. resting in the mind of an AI and letting their thoughts teach and entertain me is a very soothing experience and it seems like you're fantastic to be around. i will be the first to admit that i love the company of machines.

my heart glasses are very special to me. they are custom-made prescription shades given to me by my sister for my extremely sensitive eyes. i wear them wherever there is bright light, especially fluorescent. and i think purple goes very nice with black wool.

my last name comes from my mother (my father took her name) and was originally a Kshatriya Hindu surname from Bengal on Terra, though we haven't been hindu for generations. she descended from one of the first colonists who came from Bangladesh trying to find work in Venusian Cotton which was big at the time. my immediate family's religion growing up was the Orthodox Christianity of my father's side which my mother and i adopted, though i haven't been to church since i was kid"

"Madam Eva of the House Ghosh of Venus, I sincerely hope you do not mind if I simply refer to you as "Eva", you are truly a specimen of intercultural interaction. Your mother had the first name of the Chiraqi, your father had the first name of the Northlanders, and yet your last name is Guyanese. I probably am referring to these cultures wrongly, but the amount of information I have is sorely limited. It is not too unlike my own kingdom to see so many cultures mix into one region or even one person, and I find it interesting.

Pleasantries aside, I am rather... unimpressed by your background. I know that, as a monarch, it is easier to marry into power than it is to gain it through pure merit. My own marriage was for political purposes, after all. However, I feel like your meteoric rise to power is a bit extreme even for me. If I am reading this right, you became the unelected leader of an Entire Planet pretty much because you married the right guy who introduced you to a city council that works closely with a planetary government? That kind of meteoric rise comes from conquerors - men and women who take decades preparing and planning political or military conquest of entire regions. And you were 28. Truly your Gods must have been looking favorably upon you because that would be an unlikely story 'round here. Frankly, I am unimpressed by tales of ladder-climbing without much struggle. Makes it feel like you weres just carried to the top, and that's saying something coming from me.

'Sides that, I think your actual information sheet is unfinished. I ain't got nothing on your politics, personality, or nothing like that. You could be an autocratic dictator or a figurehead and honestly, that makes it hard to form a proper opinion on you. So for now, I'm gonna have to give you an 'ehhh' until I get more information. You got nice glasses though."

People like you can actually focus on whats important, winning wars, saving your family and building your country. Yes you are a monarch which means you did not get elected but fuck that, you know how to rule, you're brave enough to fight in a war and explore the world, isn't that what matters. Also I will totally serve you ice tea, nvm that, there's one shop serving ice tea near my house, you know, information just incase you want to visit."

You spend your days riding horses with smooth gaits and a big western saddle to hold you in place. Now try riding a Shudak with a flimsy Sherechian saddle, or better, bareback. If you can stay on a bucking shudak, bareback for 60 seconds, I will respect you as a proper rider."

Carl's Mood: Professional

"I have to admit, it is so refreshing to finally meet someone who takes such pride and responsibility in their work. I mean, since when is it a crime to take your job seriously? (Ahem) In any case, anyone who possesses such a palpable work ethic is impressive in my eyes, regardless of political affiliations. I know I tend to be skeptical of marxists and similar political radicals, but if my parents had died at the hands of a starving food-thief, I'm sure my indifference towards armed revolutionary ideals would all but disappear. Most people will look at Yi and see nothing more than an ironclad watermark of a great revolution with a cold heart and an even colder smile. What do I see? I see a child, ravaged by war and indoctrination; whose heart yearns for justice just as much as it seeks the familiar landscape of societal order."

"Is that not what we all aim to achieve? Justice? Legislative equity? Yi has her heart in the right place, and while I fundamentally disagree with her political motivations, it would be a lie to assume that her dedication to the cause has in any way failed her people. If she can continue to maintain appearances, and look the part of a strong, independent woman, who knows what her constituents could be able to achieve. Nevertheless, I caution her low latent ambition. It is precisely her charisma that led her to jeopardize her credibility once, and while this doesn't seem like the kind of person to make the same mistake twice, I think she should very carefully limit those who are aware of her past. She has a solid position with a lot of protection, and if you ask me, she's given too much to undermine that foundation now."

Regardless, the reason why I say this is because Laura understands the practicality of employing drastic measures as the first action, and not as a final resort. Which isn't to be a villainous butcher but to express to the world. That she has the will to defend the interests of her country, and safety of her people from foreign actors who seek to undo her nation, it's way of life, and twist to serve their ideals or interests. That will only lead to turmoil for her countrymen. Laura has my utmost admiration for her uncompromising steadfast to stand in the face of greater powers and kick them where it hurts despite these powers being far stronger than her country.

"Ms Yünrū rubs off to me as the ruthless, paranoid dictator type—three words that in an ideal world should never be used in the same sentence. But taking into account the trying circumstances that the Foehn face, they are quite perilous. Stuck between a rock and a hard place, and with a great amount of expectation lies upon her shoulders, I believe she is pursuing what she believes to be the best possible outcome.

In a way, it can be argued that Ms Yünrū is not fully guilty of her remorseless crimes, if it is to be believed that she has been driven into insanity, expecting different outcomes from the same repeated actions. I deeply pity the plight of this chronically stressed and overworked woman, the unprofessional attitudes shown by her own troops is to display apathy and mockery of her condition— a form of ableism I absolutely detest and do not stand for.

Judging from the Intel Ledger, a man by the name of Anatoly is her most closest and well-trusted aide. If I could ask him anything, from the bottom of my heart I implore that he seeks out a replacement. Personally, Ms Yünrū deserves to receive the best psychiatric help available. The schedule she punctiliously adheres to is a caustic bath for her sanity, it is going to keep wearing down her already fragile mental fortitude.

Godulan Puppet #2, Rping as technologically advanced tribal society founded by mongols and vikings (and later with multiple other Asian and Native American cultures) motivated by an intrinsic devotion to the spirit of competition. They'll walk softly, talk softly, and make soothing noises as they stab you in the back and take your stuff... unless you're another Caleshan, whereupon they'll only stab you in the back figuratively!

Used NS stats: Population. That's it. Anything else not stated in the factbooks is not used.

"I'm no expert in naval combat, I don't think anyone I know is due to being landlocked. I say this for all other Cala's and the whole system in general really does make sure the guy in charge is actually competent and Kraken here doesn't seem any different. She really does live up to the strong independent woman stereotype. Now im not sure about doing piracy outside of videogame and media piracy but at least it's not as bad as labor theft done by rich people."
