Monkey 3565 visited Fatatatutti and discovered that the tourist guides were accurate when they said that everything in Fatatatutti is classified as human, Alphonse or food.

Monkey 3563 was playing Oregon Trail, and all of his monkeys kept dying of dysentery. Eventually, he had enough, and decided that he would travel to Oregon himself and prove that one could make the journey without dying of dysentery.

Monkey 3563 died of dysentery.

Monkey 3562 had a heart attack, and wouldn't leave home because he didn't want to get dysentery.

Monkey 3558 looked at Medusa's face. She intended to keep the petrified monkey as home decoration, but her tail knocked it off a high place and it shattered.

Monkey 3550 was experimented on by Josef Mengele. He did survive, but he was left blind. As a result of his blindness, he was ran over by a tank.

Monkey 3549 was a spiritualist, convinced he could disassociate himself with the motion of Earth and obtain spiritual stillness in the cosmos. Well, he did. However, he forgot the Earth was rotating, and became a red stain on his house's wall.

Monkey 3548 was part of a clinical trial for a prescription drug. Unfortunately, he experienced the side effect known as death, and his observed symptoms are now listed as "rare but potentially serious side effects" on medical commercials for that same drug while patients are shown visiting carnivals and playing with their grandchildren.

Monkey 3541 never purchased the book "How to Avoid Big Ships" by Captain John Trimmer.

His canoe was turned to matchwood under the prow of a gas tanker.

Foolish monkey, you should have educated yourself while you had the chance!
