Not that this is a place to start a discussion about it, but I'm personally not against suicide. Criminalizing suicide is also just stupid. I mean seriously? What are you going to do, fine the dead? But it's not that suicide is something to look upon lightly. There's these jerks that talk about people who commit suicide are 'weak', but they really don't have any clue what they are talking about. Do they seriously not realize how hard it must be to take your life away? If anything, it probably takes a lot of strength to get yourself to actually take your life away, no matter how miserable you feel? Yes, suicide and suicidal feelings is a terrible thing to have to deal with, but who am I to stop someone from wanting to take their life away if they feel that terrible?

And there I go on an unrelated chat.

But I would feel bad for the people who loved the person who committed suicide, because they wouldn't have the guy with them anymore. It would just be a shame.

As someone who's been dealing with suicidal thoughts for a while now, I absolutely hate it when people are like "suicide is soooo bad, it's not the answer" and they clearly don't know what the situation is. I don't think that's how the situation should be handled at all.

Yeah, I know. It's not a pleasing thing any way you look at it. I like to challenge myself when I role play, and I've touched upon suicide a couple of times in my characters. It's not exactly an easy thing to play sometimes. I don't really know how to put it, because I'm not against it, but at the same time it's just terrible if someone actually has to resort to it.

Also, listening to the same as before, because it's 20 minutes long.

Sorry to hear that you've been going through that.

And I agree. That isn't how the situation should be handled. We should be finding ways to help people, not condemning them for something they can't help but feel. I feel that people go the wrong way on a lot of subjects like this that I won't go on about in a music thread. I just think people shouldn't condemn what they don't understand themselves. It doesn't help some people just like to be assholes.

And no offense is meant to you, Anollasia, in the slightest. I'm not referring to anyone in particular, just stuff I've seen around on the internet.

I've never really had any legitimate problems myself. I wouldn't say I haven't had some minor thoughts here and there, but it's usually during some annoying mood swings and it never lasts. When I kinda seemed to go into a state of depression for a week last winter, for what appeared to be no reason at all, I had some issues. But it was mostly because I just woke up feeling terrible for a week, and like I didn't want to do much. It was really weird, random, and annoying as hell.

Thanks man. People who condemn others for contemplating suicide don't help in any way at all. I'm rarely open about my feelings to people, but I think I've reached the point where I should be. Problem is, well, my SAD doesn't like it when I try to talk to people. Luckily my meds have been helping with that, but not at all with the thoughts. Hell, they've been getting worse. But I'm certain I can pull through. I'm just kinda scared.

I'm against suicide morally, but I agree that the law doesn't make much sense. I mean, talk about overkill. It's like Antigone by Sophocles, but no one's trying to stop it. The only thing that could possibly be gained by criminalizing it is scaring idiots into not doing it (them being idiotic not because they're suicidal, but due to there complete lack of being able to realize that the government can't legitimately punish a dead man), or to gain the approval of the Church (even then, I'm not so sure the church would agree when God has already put a punishment in place for suicide).

I never had to deal with the problems you're facing, and I don't know much about them, but I'd try as hard as I can to find something in life that just makes you happy. Plainly and simply happy. I know someone who once faced the same problems. He was nearly gone when his baby cousin was born, and after meeting his cousin, the problem went away. Not that you can control child births in your extended family, but it's just a thought. And I know it doesn't mean much since I'm just some stranger from the Internet, but I'm rootin' for you to pull through, and I'm sure at least some of the other common posters around these parts are too. ☐

Thank you very much. I've been looking around for the things to make me happy, but I can't make it stay for very long. I've been trying really hard to keep them close, but I sometimes lack motivation, and when it comes to people, sometimes I'm just plain afraid. I see things in suicide others don't, but I want to find some joy in life because I know it's a big decision to make and that it hurts people and that there are so many things I haven't yet done that I want to do. For now, as long as I'm determined, I know my status is bright.
