Northumbrian independence ever will. I mean I don't know

That's because Florida has a much larger population than Northumbria.

Another factor that may account for the lack of support behind the Northumbrian Independence Movement is the lack of interest from those native "Northumbrian land".

He's right though. You have a pittance of IRL support, we'll see an independent Scotland, unified Ireland and independent Texas, California and Catalonia before Northumbria so much as registers on the public consciousness.

Now for another NS Cliche that I have noticed that I am unsure of whether or not it was addressed, but people bumping posts way too early.

I guess just everyone's talking about Northumbria now. A pretty widespread movement with high name recognition, so it makes sense.

And now back to lurking but before I do

Character themes. Just... Why? Why are they necessary?

They're certainly unnecessary, but are sometimes neat. Not something I'd probably do myself though.

They really aren't, but sometimes it just adds to expressing a character's general personality and also helps with going into the author's head and seeing where they tried to take their character.

Going back on topic after we were rudely interrupted by a certain post, I believe the nature of character themes and their effectiveness for various NS leaders varies on the setting and general tone as well as the aesthetic of the nation as a whole.

For example, a character theme that's Eurobeat for an animesque nation with a fantastical setting would fit in almost seamlessly, however, a Eurobeat character theme for an MT democracy may potentially be jarring. Although one may or may not be able to pull it off.
