If its malware that attacks other malware, then you are technically off the hook, and if not, sent to create an antimlaware for the malware you just created.

If it's an Organic they'll have their digital possessions purged and be fined for potential damages that malware could've caused, were it released, and if there was a clear intent to release it. If it's an Artificial, they'll have the memories of the written malware purged, and might be subject to 2 weeks suspension of consciousness if it's severe enough.

Kidnapping carries, in itself, up to three years sentence. If applicable, torture or murder charges could increase sentence. Due to how unethical it is to perform experimentation on unwilling sapients, most scientific journals will impose a blanket ban on any of your work.
