Le Patron was unsure if it's the pungent smell of toxic waste was messing up his mind but recently, he felt more and more ill and deluded as time passed by. He has confined himself within his dimly-lit, disorganized office and forbid anybody from entering his "territory". His "partner" was too scared to even open the door leading to his office. He could hear the growl of Le Patron - growing louder by the day. In his habitat, the primal Le Patron encountered a vision. A monkey extended his hand from the skies and he could truly feel that monke has embraced him. "Deaccelerate and return to monke" Le Patron grumbled under his breath.

"There's a mindset in Russia called the "Kind Tsar" where the serf believe that the Tsar is pure and that he is truly unaware the injustice perpetrated by his own circle. Well, the King only serves to reinforce such ideals and instill them on Wölvén. I don't care if the King is kind and he looks out for the welfare of his people; for being born in nobility then he ought to have his little cut off. Fucking chipmunk, I swear I want to bite some chipmunks and defend my acorns from those motherfuckers. Grr wrr! What chu' looking at chipmunk? ought to dismember Germany so they would be too emasculated to even consider that they're "exceptional" nor they have a fucking "divinely-ordained right" to everything. His policies are "common sense" but a Futurist would not need these "reforms" as everything ought to be free and without the grinding gears of parliamentarianism to slow actual progress. I only liked Germany when they were only tribals and a pain on Rome's behind."

"It is nice to know that Christophe looks upon me with positive views despite the rather unusual visual comparison he gave. I can also give him a positive view for how he composes himself. he is a friendly individual who has done much to help ease tensions between other nations as well as aim for better policies which benefit the equality of all those within his kingdom. While he does have an environmental minister, i do not see anything that shows his views on the environment, which is a shame, because i would like to know if he genuinely cares for it before i can open better relations. I do however feel that his irritation to my disinterest in capitalism is a little bit of an overreaction. i understand that it may work well for his kingdom as it does for others. but here, capitalism, or the other modern economic systems, are just not compatible with our visions. i hope he can at least understand that. "It would seem that the two states of Mithridatium and Toebeans each possess radically different views on how a nation should be governed. One values hierarchy, strength, and progress, while the other espouses equality, compassion, and faith. Be it my biased programming or mere use of common sense, I find myself opposed to many of the beliefs of the Archdruid Esiryn, the ruler of Toebeans. She decries the supposed defiling of nature by industry, as well as the exploitation or persecution of fellow sentients. Regarding the latter, given my position within Mithridatium, I think it is safe to say that we disagree on this. Though I too share a love for nature and beauty, yet I differ from Esiryn in that I am practical about it, and understand that in order for any sort of progress to be made within a nation, nature must be obstructed in some way. How can advanced civilizations develop if they are not permitted to build anything or harvest resources, all because it may harm the environment? Or how can complex societies arise if there is no money in circulation, no economy? I find her nonsensical policies to be lacking in much thought, seemingly indicative of a childlike mind. It is truly surprising that a regime so detached from logic has managed to remain in power for as long as it has, though if I were to make an estimation, I would predict that the Archdruid's rule will soon come to an end. That is if the people of Toebeans actually wish to do something productive with their lives, and not inhabit a country perpetually locked in stagnation. If not, if they choose to reject progress and innovation, then Esiryn may continue her rule for the foreseeable future, and doom the nation to remain an undeveloped and irrelevant backwater."

You talk about nonsense but then base your policy off your emotions—rather, the emotions of the one who gave you life. All you really want is to enact your father's will, isn't it? How might one nation prosper, as you seem wishing to do, without a workforce for production after one's already slaughtered them all, exactly?"

War! What is it good for?
Absolutely nothing!

King Christophe is truly a mangled realist. He has absolutely convinced his peoples that they must return to Zion, for God had granted that land to them. These madmen have decided that this is a prophecy worthy of blood; that their nation should evict the current inhabitants, for this is a historical wrong that must be righted, and that should they fail, they will perish and be forgotten. Fascism, in short.

And what do we do with fascists?

"Indeed, he is. He has excellent leadership potential. He's also very skilled with military knowledge and tactics. Though, I suppose that comes from having actually been in the military. It seems his war is going quite well, for the most part."

Azur Deutschland's puppet. To be retconned into a fantasy Sengoku era Japan with terracotta armies and youkai clans.

QUOTE

"While the information I have been able to gather on their version of Japan is currently limited, I see no issue with Keiki and her confidant Mayumi. Indeed, if my data is accurate it would seem this Keiki may in fact be one of the Shinto kami, which would earn her immediate respect from me if true. Perhaps someday I can meet her.

Overall, it is pleasant to see a nation that welcomes yōkai such as myself, even if it would appear many of its inhabitants became yōkai through unexpected and unfortunate means. If the second world war was the same as in my timeline their collaboration with the Axis is concerning if it continues today, though I will reserve judgement until more information is collected. Overall my opinion is positive for now."

IC Name: Ketorushima

Arctic island inhabited by kitsune and other yōkai.

Set about a decade after the world becomes aware of the supernatural. Details on that will come later.

Slowly trying to rework the factbooks and write for this nation again. Sometimes I worry I'm bad at writing but I think I'm getting better
