And seeing as 'his people' means the people of half an entire galaxy, that is no small responsibility. I appreciate his efforts to combat many of the universal evils plaguing the universe, as well as his policy of giving the individual planets under his control great autonomy. Overall my opinion is greatly positive."

"To put it simply, Konrad is a fucking mad man. I mean, there's hardly a single aspect of his life that doesn't sound like a bad trip - he's tutored cult leaders and serial killers, he may be singly responsible for the Judeist thought, he's damn phisic, and to top it all off as a politician he is certifiably insane. Any man who seriously considered the idea of 'free-style roads' for more than a second has to be. And despite all of this, I kind of love him. Sure, cannibalism might not be something you want on your resume, and God knows that's the least of the disagreements I might have with him. But he's a true rebel, a visionary. A man who's had everything and nothing in equal measure. And after all, isn't it the madmen who end up changing the world?"

I say though I find his inability to truly push in equal marriage into law is either, if charitable, a sign of the great resistance to civility in his country, or if we are not charitable, his inexperience in the forum of politics, at least in his early career. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. Besides that, it's good for him to be careful when appearing bold and uncaring about people's opinions on him-better not shutdown on his opposers and not responding to these opinions against him with aggressive speech lest he wants to be ousted from power himself which, understandably, is not what he wants. sighs yet I am not so much of a big fan of his skills, I personally believe there needs to be a few major tweaks here and there to, y'know, make him appear...damn I forgot I what I was going to say...never mind.
