PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitravgrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

"Admittedly, Mr. JP here is blessed with convenient stacked modifiers that exempt him from a far harsher criticism. Purely as an individual, and completely ignoring his demeanors, I'd say that JP is a decent leader who tries to figure out what's best for his nation, especially against a chaotic backdrop that can easily led him to horrific pathways.
Maybe that's too generous of a praise for a war criminal, but I'd be blatantly lying if I pretend to care about those sort of stuff."

"...Of course, all of that basically amounts to very little. If there's something worse than the stagnation of progress, it is the illusion of progress. Problem, because Christenmark's problems are inherently systemic. Here's a great litmus to test whether a society is functional: it doesn't, and will not, blow up into civil wars. And JP's solution is... the creation of gargantuan bureaucratic blob predisposed to gridlocks and the maintenance of the status quo. Hey, I've seen this before, the ending was quite funny. Though, not too surprising: as expected for a sheltered aristocrat lacking in the spirit of disruptive creativity. Just don't be shocked if you find interesting surprises waiting for you at the end of the line."

@USSECNARE

"I mean, what can I say... hoping that something other than a snake would come from a nest of snakes is called idiocy. I do find similarities between myself and Mr. Miroslavsky in some policy preferences, though, maybe too much for my liking. And despite all the shenanigans throughout the war, I mean, I don't expect much from what is closer to Liberia but with toxic fallout. The fact that he can hold onto his country together after the fact, stable enough to even allow reformists and its reforms, is what matters, and by no small feat. Ultimately, it sounds strange to say, but Mr. Miroslavsky is objectively a sufficiently decent statesman if his performance is measured through any standardized figures—GDP, HDI, and whatnot. The only question is that whether he will try to make this rump of a state sustainable by eventual governance through reliable institutions... or will he corrupt himself too much like so many others. It'll be quite interesting to watch."

"Everyone gonna claim and say, that his position is based on facts and logics, nerd dude. Everyone! Still, the people are something greater than a set of mathematical formulas, no matter, how complicated or smart ass they are. Brains can be manipulated, but to an extent. He can say whatever he wants about me, us and our mental capabilities, but unlike him, we will never abandon our elderly, veterans or anyone else, for we are in it together and once we unlock the secrets of immortality, all our horde shall get it.

Personally, I'd pity him and his goons if they tried to oppress our veterans of revolution... they are withered, but still hardened and cunning warriors.

I sure believe, he has some right ideas, but this nihilism... if he calculates, that it's more beneficial to kill half of his people, he wouldn't hesitate to do so, and when confronted he'll say, that "Right and wrong are just brain chemicals reacting". That's not how the leader is supposed to lead his own people. Besides, this makes this smart ass predictable.

But I agree... UBI sounds like a nice idea."-Shawn Bjornson

Anyway, it has been a while, I would see. How are you doing? I think there still is something to be said that I would rather disapprove of myself, and I have made it clear that I don't want to be that political all the time. A military man, being shot, that is rather normal, as I like to think. But I unfortunately have no praise for someone such as yourself who would go around and brag about the war crimes that they have done. Regardless of political ideologies, and without falling into the diched sayings, you have definitely fallen into the very hole that you sought to get out of. What good are you as a person if you lead prisoners to dig their own graves and to shoot them? Aren't you harboring the same brutality as the "imperialists and capitalists" that you are trying to fight against? Every day, we can make this whole a little heavenly or hellish, and it starts with every single one of us, which I think we all need to remember.

As leader of an asian themed country, sorry but no, just no. We will all perish no matter how big or powerful, in fact the best method of self-perseverance is to not bring all your attention to yourself. Yes we must unite occasionally againts external threats but I prefer making a sort of asian "warsaw pact" than creating one huge country. Different countries need different governments.

"As one might imagine as a monarchist, I don't see eye to with a socialist like him on many issues. However, as a soldier no one pays me to hear my political thoughts, just my military ones. As I can't find anything on his military polices I'll just rail on him for his admitted war crimes and speeches. As a lifelong professional soldier from a military with a very strong professional tradition, I am disguised by such breaches in discipline. It also tends to be a bad idea to give a speech against corruption when you have mentioned how proud you were to use corruption to your advantage, doesn't tend to be a good example."

@SGPAS

We will see in time whether or not Johnny Goldstar can be as effective a leader as his assassinated predecessor.
