death would be very common and - as such - mourning it or making a complex ritual/mythology surrounding it would be the least of their concerns.

Also, in the Ghesite Faith, the world has always existed and will always exist, repeating its cycle of life and death for a literal eternity. This is very interesting to me as I don't know of any religion which - at the very least - puts this much focus on that aspect. Most religions I know have a definite beginning, whether it be God has always existed but he created the universe (Abrahamic Religions, Hopi religion, Hinduism) or the universe was created alongside the Gods (Greek/Norse religion). It's kinda beautiful in a way, if not physically impossible given entropy. ~~Unless the Ghesites or another in-universe nation discover a way to reverse/negate entropy, which I highly doubt.~~

AN: Ludistan claims to be socialist, democratic, constitutional, and absolute monarchy all at the same time. Given how many of these coming together are oxymorons, such as a socialist monarchy, democratic absolutists, constitutional absolutists, monarchial democracy, etc, I am very confused as to how this nation has collapsed or isn't a North Korea situation where it calls itself a democracy but is actually an absolutist nation.

The Marshers religious movement, which is dominant across most of Wexas, preaches the three values of Reverence, Virtue and Equality.

Also rather interestingly, the religion seems to maintain an almost tribalistic manner (being structured around communal throat singing and dances), despite the fact that their timeline is set more than 700 years into the future.

Although they are called Advanced Walking Panzers, these giant mechas are capable of flight and are typically used by pilots to perform "Ricochet flying," a style of combat flight where the panzers turn on a dime to fly at sharp angles with almost instantaneous deceleration and acceleration (the main advantage of this being that the sharp angles make guided missiles virtually useless against AWP's). The human body normally would be injured by the G forces of this kind of movement, but 8MS nanotechnology strengthens pilots bodies to be able to hold up to that kind of strain. In addition, pilots generally need high P3 levels—a measurement of a kind of virtually-precognitive multitasking ability—to even fly AWP's successfully, as the mental toil of mecha flight and combat is evidently not for your everyday pilots.

Nevertheless, a crack team of nearly superhuman pilots wasn't quite good enough for the AOU. With their new All-Terrain Advanced Carrier (ATAC), the AOU apparently discovered that directly fusing a human—even a child—with the vehicle's computer systems allows them to "create" next level "artificial intelligence" capable of autonomously operating the ATAC's powerful weapons systems.

Overall, lots of turning humans into weapons, both metaphorically and literally.

Their "gods" are much more realistic than those of most monotheistic traditions on earth. Somewhat of a ditheistic tradition, they had a "good" and "evil" god that immediately created sentient life to duke it out on each other on behalf of them.

AN: As one might guess, their "security force" (equivalent, I assume, to military+law enforcement) is near-totally made of automatons. Unless each of these robots is just absurdly powerful, their have a relatively small military, it appears.

When it comes to nations based on fictional landmasses in the real world, Aikoland is probably one of the most realistic.

If such an archipelago actually existed in the Mediterranean it would certainly be possible it could develop into a nation just like Aikoland (though it likely wouldn't be named Aikoland as Aiko is a name primarily of Eastern origin)

The Fourth Internationale is set up as what I assume to be a socialist political alliance in 1955. They were founded by Leskya, Irish, and French political leaders. Now since they're the Fourth Internationale, I wonder what's their ideological alignment. Trotskyism?

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

"The Story of Modern Patagonia begins in 1976 when Konrad "Maestro" Svoboda attempted to begin WWII by deploying nukes against the Soviet Union and bring forward an Armageddon that would end humanity. This plan would begin with the seizure of a Mech via Mercenaries from the United States Government.

The Patron would have the Mech modified with propulsion systems and a collection of other armaments and would then be deployed to launch an assault on the City of Leningrad. The conclusion of this assault leaves some 10 million dead.

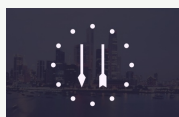

Despite this, however, The Patron's dream would not however come to its conclusion. Thanks to actions taken by Bush Jr. who would challenge and kill the Patron Mech to Mech, and without their demi-god leading them the People of South America, of Patagonia, would splinter into multiple other groups of... well interesting factions to say the least."

CFC-JSCD1-002 Jerichos (Jerichoes?) incorporate NCAF, a sort of weird nano composite which takes the place of flesh, a skeleton, and really a lot of things in its humanoid construction. Being composed of nanomechanical bots which are themselves composed of many other things, the material is able to harden in response to physical trauma ~~son~~, greatly reducing the damage inflicted by brute kinetic force. This allows the energy to be distributed across a large mass of NCAF so that actual loss in nanite functionality from damage is minimized. The stuff's good at dealing with bullets, harsh environments, EMPs, and DEWs, but what it isn't good at dealing with is plasma. This is where its armor comes in, the platey bits that stop the Jerichos from just looking like gray goopy people. The plating is a composite which incorporates Lunar Titanium which is a better hurt-stopper. I know it probably has to go through some fancy fabrication process before it ends up on a drone but it's still gonna be my headcanon that they just slap whatever they've peeled off of a dead spaceship onto a Jericho. Gives em' a bit more soul yknow.
