"The little Albanian is kindof a weird man, eh? I've seen quite a few warlords und uptight generals in my life. Hell, I think I killed one of the latter once. Couldn't tell. Ahh, but you don't need to hear about that. What I was saying is that you're a unique bred. Most generals of your kind I've seen are typically either corrupt, fat, und ootgoing, or skinny, stuckup, und a control freak. But you're different. You may not be the most liberating und friendly of generals. But you know what, you truly are different. You've managed to create a state where nothing can go against you. Got to admit, even if I don't agree with the means, it's still pretty impressive. Und hey, teaching it to a bunch of dumb Romans und pretend Romans is something I can always respect. May your... de facto rule be ever long, Mr... Soto-Rak? So-Tah-Rack? I don't know. Still, good tidings."

Oswald's Status: Avoiding a restart of the Great War, his country engaged in a frozen conflict with the remaining Allied nations

"The King Soady of Yooper is a killer, and though the majority of German Protestants including my family and myself are not on terms with the Catholics, his murderous act against them cannot be ignored. Every leader and person must be aware of this murderer, of what he has done and what he is capable of doing towards innocent people in the future. I think of the people he has put under his sword and the blood he spilt in his raids. And with a name like the 'Yooper High Kingdom' I imagine its standards as a sovereign state have been made even lower under this 'King' Soady, a deplorable and despicable killer, along with his band of killers who raid, pillage and rape, something like the Vikings have done to the places they have come across." - His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald I

"I am a bisexual dude with a group of lovers, and I indulge in orgies with them and the Council, ha! This is why Oswald the First, that all uptight dude from conservative family doesn't understand my way of life and gonna call me names, all sorts of names. His favorite is gonna be "Degenerate", that sweet fancy buzzword for some right-wingers to describe everything sexual and affectionate, which is outside heterosexual monogamous same race marriage and child creation. At least we both agree, that racism is bad... We also agree, that innocents are to be protected. Although, we might have different understanding of "Innocents". I also disagree with his anti-socialism, it's too hardline.

Damn... running low on tequila, gonna get some other booze rom the fridge. Aha! Ukrainian horilka! Fine vodka for me! Hearty gulp Now, where did I stop... Oh, on Oswald. Sure, he has no sons to inherit the throne, but... dude! He has daughters! Why not remove those stupid Salic laws and let them inherit! I mean, he is a goddamn Emperor of superduper Fatherland, he can make the change. So far, I have yet to see his opinion on us, so I know, if it's better to try and establish some sort of positive realltions or dismiss this altogether and focus on other countries."-Overboss Shawn Bjornson

Ataman Stepanov's thoughts on War hound

War hound's children aren't interesting in the slightest, so there is no point to cover them. That said, the War hound itself looks pretty unsettling in one of the images which was provided by intel gatherers - sure, Black Army in Free Territory has a significant power and Free Territory is militarized to the brim as well, but it seems that the realm he rules over seems to function pretty much for purposes of war and looking for new victims to bring terror upon. A good amount of luck seems to be required for any foreign ambassador to deal with Tundra Terra. Besides that, War hound also appears as pretty pompous and grand at times - some of our generals wonder if he is trying way too hard with all of those phrases.

War hound took a keen interest on all things related to strategy, politics, economics... Seems like he is the person who looks largely at the big picture and what role it plays in the life of a society, rather than shorter specializations of it. War hound was certainly forged by fighting wars at odds which would usually bring down a nation, yet what is the most important is what his nation is nowadays. And right now it makes all other nations in his verse' to pale in comparison - that already tells something. As for the ambassadors... War hound seems to have killed over 400 of them - seems like he not only beat Vlad the Impaler in terms of brutality towards ambassadors, but went way over that. Some of the War hound's bright sides are the fact that he has other hobbies than just warfare and slaughter, along with being caring for his own people, but all of that is overshadowed by his dark side; one could also wonder if his nation has any allies at all. In the end, what is the opinion on this War hound? From all the leaders Stepanov has met so far, this particular person has raised the most fear and disgust from Ataman Stepanov. Stepanov understands why War hound and his nation turned out like that, but still doesn't condone the actions. Solid negative.

make that war something at least a few people but himself can profit off, and as far as I can tell you... don't. You're a colonialist with a rod up his ass who probably views people like me in about the same light I see you. Which is... fair, enough people hate me I've stopped losing sleep over it. Thing is, people like you drove the Confederacy into the ground, and people like me didn't wise up to what they were doing until it was too late. You'll do the same for your... Danelaw. Only difference is I wept then. I won't weep for you.

□THE EMPEROR□

A dossier stood on top of Deby's task. Its cover blank and its content unknown to foreign eyes. However as Deby skim-read and read it in his heart, he felt unease for the first time and his Djinn felt it too. Whoever he was... he was mysterious.

"This is weird. I couldn't even find a single information about them. Jean, can they be a Djinn Master? Smart Djinn Masters tend not to divulge too much information about them. However, there is not much information on this Monarchess which leads me to think that they're hiding a secret... or they're that unremarkable. Astaghfirullah."

"Prime ministers are a pointless addition to an otherwise functioning system and Elizabeth here is a perfect example of that. What does she do other than suck up to her monarchs and spout off the same propaganda that a propaganda minister could do just the same. All she exists to do is give the populous undue power and make the Von Roland's an ego boost for being such benevolent monarchs. My opinion is negative."

The Heavenly Kingdom is effed up.

"It is an evil demon, a scary and evil demon from Hell! All it does is rob the living creations of God's sway and make them part of his demon army. It is likely the demon will send his demon troops to slaughter the people of the Heavenly Kingdom. Violent, bloodthirsty demon...I pray to God to send my ancestor Hong Xiquan, the first Taiping Heavenly King, Hero of the Heavenly Kingdom and slayer of demons, to come down from Heaven."

"You seek foreign intervention? Spineless girl, take control! Those princes and dukes gorge themselves and revel in their decadence, content to let your empire rot. Make an example of them! Hang their bodies from the highest towers as a warning to others who would seek their own personal gain above the will of the state. Your minions seek to undermine you? Crush them! If they do not respect your kindness, perhaps they will respect your cruelty instead. You can give them only so many chances."-Lord-General Sotorak

Ataman Stepanov's thoughts on Lord-General Sotorak

Sorotak of Latorik seems to have a pretty stubborn personality - it on its own might not be the worst trait someone could have and being stubborn is understandable in the situation he finds himself in, but at the same time he might also come across as knucklehead, which is not too good for the image either. Also, Sorotak seems to be pretty eager to participate in violence - that might be both good and bad, once again depending on the situation. Either way, let's move on from dissecting his personality to his background.

Just like Stepanov, Sorotak is a pragmatist and also seeks to control the various generals which too are vying for power within the Free Territory. The dissent shouldn't be too much of a concern, because there will always be elements which will disapprove of you, and the best thing which most rulers can do is providing enough distraction for maximum amount of people. Looking at Sorotak's military history, it seems that he was on a pretty good victory streak until his army broke their nose against a strong enemy - at least the old man had plenty of vassals and their reserve troops to save them from a total embarrassment, even though that stain is going to haunt his career. If anything, in long term it will do even more damage, as his previous pristine record is no more clean, Sorotak seems to also have taken a more outwards and diplomatic stance recently - good enough for country of Latorik, in whatever pursue they might be aiming for. Overall, Sorotak is a decent enough strongman for his place, Stepanov and him both don't step on each other's toes, and there is not much else to say. Positive.
