It's been a long time since I've done a war RP, for many reasons. They're very tricky to do in general when you want to handle them right. Especially forumside here, where you have to find ways to either restrict things to certain tech levels from joining at all (which is hard when your own tech level is not very conventional) or to somehow balance the field without making things unreasonable in either direction.

Civil wars can be a great tool, but I've mainly seen them used in my experience as either just background fluff (which is fine!), an excuse to do RP at all (which is understandable!) and as a means to change ideology. I'm guilty of that myself to some degree. I do like to think I address the human cost of wars when I do them, but it probably took me a while to get into that habit. And to be fair, any civil war in Kyoki Chudoku tends not to have a "good" side these days- even the one semi-democratic rebellion was chaotic mess of divergent ideologies.

It's always good to remember that just because people side with something doesn't mean they support everything that side stands for.

I mean, it's nice to have a proper response, though the lack of research is blatant given there's UUMs designed to counter torps and to a limited extent mines (see: Shark UUM)... Not to mention sonar exists.

Also the three branches work to support each other in a war, with (most) amphibious assaults supported by a "hail of fire" from ships and offshore bombardment, with infantry and armor soon being delivered, as paratroopers are delivered behind enemy lines to raise hell and connect with the advancing force... As helis support the advances.

Still... Better than "lol ok we win, die."

Every F7 thread has its peaks and valleys. As annoying as it can be when you put a lot of effort into something and it seems to be wasted, know that at least some people are trying their hardest and giving their all, even if it doesn't seem like it's enough of them.

Honestly, I'd say that both are true. Both "How YN Soldiers feel about fighting the AN Soldiers" and "All Endings AN" have problems with low-effort dipshits putting zero effort into their posts, and it's honestly quite a shame considering that there are also people in both threads who actually put any bloody effort in their responses. The All Endings AN thread isn't being any more badly affected by low-effort posters than the other. Matter of fact, many threads here just have that particular issue, I think the upcoming summer is starting to bring in more of these posters to this site.

Honestly! Right after my two (rather long) responses to Ludwigsburg and Aquaria, Lechia just did the "your nation is destroyed by a devil cult lol" ending.

Someone had already written that ending better; they named it the Second Flensing, and it's one of the cooler collapse endings I've read

It's also a lot easier to say "hurrdurr your nation collapse POOF" than for the people writing those to read factbooks and get an idea for a genuine ending, so I think that's the reason it's the popular summie-tier go-to.

See at this point I think y'all are just gonna have to accept that the forum games board isn't the place you go if you want high-quality replies. Like people use this board to have fun and chillax, you know? Personally, if a thread requires more effort than 'quickly checking through someone's nation or factbooks' then I ain't bothering with that thread at all tbh.

If I wanted to put effort into my posts, I'd do it on one of the boards where the number beneath my profile goes up so I get the serotonin in my monkey brain as I get slowly closer to achieving the rank of 'Postmaster-General'.

It helps that most of the quote unquote effort threads that exist also seem to be involve military stuff and, honestly, that is just straight fuckin dullsville to me lol, so it's easy for me to ignore them.

God, maybe I should recreate a more vintage-style of F7 thread like a 'How is AN taught about in YNs schools' or 'Your tourist review of the above nation', those were kind of fun threads back in the day.

Actually there's a cliché right there: F7 thread topics that used to be pretty common but just died out.

honestly that's a bit too far for even myself. it's one thing to do a general rant against summies in general after getting a REALLY SHIT "didn't bother reading your stuff at all lol"-type post, it's another to have a lot of posts dedicated to that one guy (Texkentuck).

also, on an unrelated note, I think you should proly snip the quotes to cover only the bits you're replying to. helps make the posts look neater.
