Very few stores offer refunds on electronic media in order to prevent this, however if you did this and were caught and convicted you would liable for a fine of up to K5,000,000 (NSD$250,000).

Indecent acts, such as masturbating in public, are penalised by a fine of £10 (approx. 1.800 in today's US dollars) and/or six months imprisonment with or without hard labour, depending on the context.

Either a lengthy prison sentence or summary execution, really depends on the particular mood of the officer that managed to stop and catch the traitorous rascal.

Placing fake evidence on someone innocent.

Legally it would result in execution, but in practice this is almost never punished because both the government and companies can use more prison labor.

You're in deep trouble if you try doing this to a noble or a royal, though.

alert alert no crime detected

What would be the punishment for killing someone, if the killer saved someone else's life by doing it? (for example, the dead person was about to commit murder)

Not necessarily a criminal offense if it's proven that the victim was indeed a threat. In that instance it would classify as self defense in most parts of the Empire.

A possible 1 day imprisonment for stealing, and any fines indicted from a lawsuit by the parrot's owner.

What would be the punishment for breaking and entering, assault, battery, and theft. (In the order listed).

Animal cruelty, breaking and entering and being a public nuisance would lead to the following up to 8 years for the animal cruelty, up to 12 for breaking and entering and a lot of annoyed glances for being a public nuisance.

Edit Ninjad

for aan you would get up to 12 for breaking and entering, up to 22 for assault, 5 for battery, and depending on the value stolen between 2 years and 45 years for theft. (In the order listed).

deliberately making a public transport late with the full intention for causing a delay

If we're talking about Earth's Moon, it would not be a crime since we hate humanity, the Earth, and everything associated with them. If we're talking about any moon, the punishment would be execution if there was a significant tabulon population or important resources on it that were lost during the bombing.

And if we're talking about our moon, that would be a weird situation since our homeworld is a moon. Bombing our homeworld would carry a tremendous punishment indeed. Most likely being public tortured before becoming a test

i wish i could execute or imprison them, but unfortunately buhers doesnt have those policies. the next-best thing would be a lifetime of house arrest (confinement to your home and a 15-km radius around it), at least 10 hours of community service per day, and not being allowed within a kilometer of a child center
if the criminal themself is a minor, then they'd receive at least 2500 hours of community service

NS stats (civil rights/economy/political freedoms) mostly NOT canon. There are some civil rights and liberties and political freedoms in Vertillia but the government is mostly authoritarian, especially when it comes to immigration, climate change, crime, and punishment.

It depends a little on the consequences. Most likely you'd get away with a 10 year jail sentence and be forced to make a humiliating public apology, however it's possible that it could be interpreted as an act of treason against the Empress, for which you could still legally get the death penalty.
