Heh, for me I love the band and his solo work. He's got a variety on his solo work and the band has a big variety as well. I mean, Gobbledigook (which is equally awesome) is quite different from Glosoli.

Sigur Ros-Untitled 8.

Now, for me, especially at around 6 minutes, is one of the most 'epic' songs I've ever heard. Untitled 7 is up there as well. Apparently I love the dark songs.

Well, when it comes to the 'untitled' lot, I like 1, but not really any of the others that much. I forgot that I was quite taken by Saegoplur about 3 years ago, but I hadn't heard it for ages. I was once obsessed and I did stand there in a local store about 2 months ago, debating over Valtari, Borgore's Misadventures in Dubstep, and What Did You Expect from The Vaccines?. I had a listen before of Valtari, but whilst it was okay, I was underwhelmed. I left with none of them in the end, though.

From what I can tell, you are more of the type that likes a select few of Sigur Ros' song. And that's perfectly okay.

While I like Valtari, because they did great with their ambient music, since they seem to do great with any genre they touch, I wouldn't say it's my favorite Sigur Ros album.

I've actually never been a huge fan of the Sigur Ros song Untitled 2 for some reason. It's probably one of the few I've never posted that I

Well, yes; there was a time where it was all Sigur Ros, Bjork, Crystal Castles, and LCD Soundsystem in my playlists, but my tastes really expanded about 2 years ago... again.

With Radiohead, I am more open to their music, though my favourite is Karma Police.

I like Tool as well. At least some. You might be interested in the singer of Tool's new project, that I think kind of his solo work. It's pretty different from Tool (Which is a good thing in my opinion. Sounding exactly the same when you make a new project seems like it'd defeat the point), and my dad just introduced me to it. Here, here, and here. Also, they vary a lot within the album, so if you don't like one, you might like the other.

I do like my slower, trippy-ish stuff. I have heard two of these, because I knew someone who, at the time, just found Tool, then Keenan's new project and I like them very much- have them on a playlist; I wasn't impressed by A Perfect Circle, despite the awesome names in it like James Iha of The Smashing Pumpkins- one band I never stop listening to, after about 10 years of SOLID listening.

EDIT: Man Overboard and Green Valley were the ones I already had.

I haven't actually heard A Perfect Circle yet, but I created a Spotify playlist of it to go through at some point.

And 10 years ago I would of been 7:P I think the only band I've really listened to since I was 7 would be Eyvind Kang

And I don't even know exactly what about it, but I was really digging the Man Overboard song in particular for some reason. But I'm digging The Rapture one too.

The Curse of Izanagi, Sigh

OFF THE HOOK

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.
