"Barbarian is not a word I would typically use to describe... anyone, really, much less a head of state. But the Queen practically embodies barbarism. Spitting in the face of the citizenry she lords over, seeking to rule solely by fear and by might of arms... precisely the sort of ruler to wind up strung from a flagpole. And I've no doubt that that is exactly where Tove will end up - her stance towards her own people is abhorrent to put it lightly, she gives absolutely no consideration to foreign relations, and her shoehorning of all available resources into the military is unsustainable. The fact that she "does not care about economic policy" helps illustrate the extent of her sheer, bloody-minded idiocy. Less ruler, more mongrel - no better than the warlords so routinely culled from Jodayan shores. The only people to ever be grateful to this utter fool for anything will be the firing squad she is marched out in front of - no doubt, the arms with which she will have provided them will be of great use."

"It's ironic how often people who despise the monarchy could be great monarchs. The Vozhd's stance toward religion is understandable for his situation, but not optimal, as pulling people away from their established beliefs can sometimes cause discomfort among the population. The fact that man is prolific both on the battlefield and in politics shows what a great leader he is, and while he would probably not approve of me, I admire him and his leadership."

Wrote a response just a while ago:

"King Antimonos appears at the moment to be a respectable figure, and seems practical in his leadership to maintain his power as a monarch while implementing democratic elements into his government. It is always good to have a strong man in reserve to ensure the nation triumphs overtimes that call for desperate measures. However, in my personal opinion would better if that strong man was always in control, and not let out of the closet from time to time but that's just me. Overall my assessment is fairly positive.

Rapture City

- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...
- Not an 1-1 exact replica of Bioshock lore and Rapture City. Only the city's atmosphere and setting is maintained.

"Oh, you're an adorable little sweetheart, aren't you? Ah, my apologies, I shouldn't be babying you. You're only a few years younger than me. However, if I might be honest for a second, you remind me of myself when I had just entered politics. Juvenile, idealistic and a tad bit naive perhaps but don't let that sound like I don't wholeheartedly admire you. In fact, you're a rather agreeable lady, Ms. Miller and dare I say, a role model but don't let that compliment get to your head now. Your modest nature is a great plus and I can't possibly deny that you are more than qualified for your position.

I have my eye on you but rest assured, I'm watching you with great interest. Take care now, Ms. Miller. Also, I did notice your interest in video games. I'll be frank. I'm not exactly a fan of entertainment like that but if you're willing, I would love to learn from the best. Perhaps, I could teach you how to play a few board games or maybe even read a couple of books alongside you if that doesn't sound too boring." - Ambrosia
