I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

With some of these songs, they definitely bring something interesting to the post-rock genre. I remember them catching my attention because they sounded less...generic then a lot of post-rock I've heard that had the stereotypical post-rock guitar sounds and linear structure. None of the songs without vocals I've really considered to be bad.....just boring and doesn't bring anything noteworthy to the genre for me to give a crap about them.
