Arabian unification under the House of Saud seems not to have taken place. As such, the Arabian Peninsula is a myriad of petty Arab states, rather than dominated by one or two dynasties.

the Arab League is pretty much the ONLY thing keeping them from causing WW3

AL is similar to the HRE, but actually works, and cannot be dismantled.

High-ranking military officials are usually referred to as 'the scarves.' Red scarves are responsible for planetary defense, while their Black counterparts are more about voidfleets. Strangely enough, Red scarves are considered more prestigious, renowned and pompous than void admirals.

Wrong thread? I mean the content still works so whatever Occidens Praseodymia roughly means "Western Green Twin". Occidens originating from Latin while prasinos and dydymos originating from Greek.

The Frisian economy depends heavily on international trade; their mercantilist views are firmly upheld by the government. They've established their network all the way to the Carribean and are looking for a way to expand to Asia and Oceania.

It is an African country that was never colonized by Europeans, but instead maintains peaceful relationships with those countries. A majority of the population is of mixed ethnicity. English and Chinese are the main languages for business, while the native language of Praseodymian is mostly used in casual conversation. The fourth official language of Papiamento is from the Caribbean (Portuguese creole with Dutch/Spanish influence) and is not used very often.

Waisnor's territory is part of the greater north european plain and, as such, its terrain is mostly flat. Despite this, Novogradok is the country's highest point, totalling at 324 meters which is smaller than average compared to other European countries.

Doreania is actually protestant - just another difference between them and France- because the movement that led to eventual unification was fed up with the Pope abusing power and money instead of the kings themselves.
