"Nikolai is what I call someone with common sense combined with a fair mix of individualism and egalitarianism, a very Sherechian way of thinking really. His diplomatic standpoint is what we Sherechians like to do, peace, while carrying a rather big gun because while peace is nice, its not always possible and having a big gun to intimidate someone into peace or at least defend yourself if things go wrong is common sense. Rebellious, decided to join the military despite his father wanting him to get a boring job, and using his connections to bring equality to the military, that's Sherechian. Nikolai, if you want Sherechian Citizenship, just call me and I will personally give it to you... wait im dead, that might be a problem."

Luckily the enemy seemed to fare little better, they proved hopelessly corrupt and inefficient, unable to resist the NMB advance. "I won't lie, I bear a lot of animosity towards people like Jasper, and I haven't really kept that a secret during any of my previous testimonials. He is plainly, irrefutably, and without a shred of objectionable doubt a genuinely horrible person. He embodies everything wrong with Alkdorian upper management, and probably represents the single most tyrannical deadweight currently encumbering the people of his nation. I don't find his sob story sympathetic, and I certainly don't find his colligated garment-based impersonation of a discothèque pimp at all inspiring. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link, just as a corporatocratic dictatorship is only as convincing as it's most narcissistically paranoid babysitter. With how shamelessly self-absorbed this guy is, I'm really not buying his even-handed charade whatsoever. Everything this man does is a calculated move that promotes his agenda, and I get the feeling he sees professional mercy as less of an act of kindness and more of an insurance premium in the interest of his own self preservation. He knows just how far he needs to go to bequeath his most dirty of dirty work without risking a full-on coup, and frankly, that's his biggest crime of all."

"I really hoped that I'd have the opportunity to express a more neutral judgement for this guy, but nobody, and I mean nobody can sugarcoat this man's antics. I just hope for his sake, he's making peace with his personal god, because there will come a time where Jasper's luck finally runs out, and no amount of charisma will be able to protect him"

If he really belives, that robots rule better, then maybe it would be better to replace him with a robot vacuum cleaner? I mean, robo-vacuum is far more useful. It doesn't call people degenerates, it doesn't meddle with bed affairs between consenting adults, it doesn't genocide innocents. It just diligently cleans floors. And it would look better with a crown. And both don't know, what traditions mean. Cause traditions are not "Sex bad, fascism good, let's kill some innocents cause they were born that way." fighting for a just cause. Bjornson is definitely one to admire, but his tendency toward violence is... well, partly regrettable, as it has helped so many overcome their oppressors, but is still violence. Overall, he is a noble warrior, fighting for a just cause of liberty, however he might not be the best fit for a firm leader in the long-term due to his violent tendencies. Perhaps we could meet someday and have a non-political chat or two."

Viktoria, Germanian Empress

"...And onto a socialist nation. My assessment of this one is going to be rather...colored, I'm afraid. One doesn't need to look much farther than what the Reds did to the Ryurikovs and just how badly they ran Ruthenia into the ground afterwards for my reasons why. However, I will at the very least endeavor to be fair to this man. If only because he shows me that same courtesy."

"Herr Estima's childhood seem to have been quite normal by the standards of his pastoral environment, aside from a deeply unfortunate accident that apparently inspired a patriotic kind of spiritual revelation in the aftermath. The failures of the Sherechian republican government and the injustices laid against him and his village made him into a leader at a very young age. One bold enough to lead a full rebellion against the brutal and dictatorial overlords that actually ruled his land...The desperation and suffering entailed that gave rise to those circumstances is little short of horrific in the mind's eye. Made worse because I have had the misfortune to bear witness to circumstances all too much like it. Now, I cannot condone revolution, my position commands it. Yet I cannot blame the boy and his people for doing what they did. I also cannot say that I am terribly sorry that the previous government of Sherechia fell."

"That said, Estima's rule is a mixed bag. His citizens now have the liberty to speak their minds without fear from the censor or the whip, the old order is done away with, and the country has been able to rebuild from the overthrow, but his rule elsewhere is...mad. Like the reverse side of the coin to some of the more parodic dictators I have read upon. No requirement for driver's licenses or health inspections, no copyright, and perhaps more importantly, the outright torture and killing of those accused and convicted of corruption, with at least one of roughly 800 of these overseen personally. This man is not a Jugashvili, but by God all of that is going too far in the opposite direction..."

But the value of one person being broken pales in the value of the many lives that you still can blow to smithereens.

I, General Onox, hope that you will recover from your likely temporary weakness and return to having the world be engulfed in this destructive fire.
When that happens, I, General Onox, wish to duel you, so I can gain the prestige of beating one with even higher numbers of victims behind her.

there was nothing else that the man could do. He could knock down buildings, but he couldn't pitch a pup tent without instructions, clearly marked parts, and a guide. Needless to say, his inability to function outside of war swiftly led to his ouster. I tell this story because I see it in you. You may have united various peoples into fighting for you, but you don't make anything. You just kill and steal. It may serve in the short term, but eventually... you will encounter a challenge you cannot surmount by force of arms alone. Among our kind, it is seen as a great injustice that one should be 'blessed' with divine power and augmentations to one's abilities that allow them to function well above the norm without any kind of struggle. Bear in mind, I do not say this as if to discount the fact that you have struggled in the face of many threats, I fully acknowledge and respect such things. However, those of us who lead the Caleshan Tribes worked to get to their position, from the ground up, invariably. My children gain little benefit from being my progeny, outside of the wisdom that I can provide. My personal thoughts concerning 'the Iron Tiger'

"I believe I have met one of these 'Calas' before, and to be honest my memory is not the best as I do forget some characters overtime. Perhaps, I won't forget about this 'Iron Tiger' next time."

"So it seems this Iron Tiger is a mason of armour and steel, a master in his craft; smelting and forging metals to fashion them into weapons of war. No doubt it is an area where he does not just feel like a king, but is the king. And no doubt this fact is something he takes immense pride in. However, I respect any man who makes tools to feed the hungry; the tools needed to build homes for those who do not have homes to live in, not a man who makes tools needed to wage endless and meaningless 'competition' with other factions. And Iron Tiger is not that man, including the ones he is in 'competition' with."

"To paraphrase from one of my tutors: "A nation state cannot be established from a nation who wages endless and meaningless war against one another (for the Calashans, out of competition no doubt) and a state that is divided into warring factions of those nations."

-His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald I

Edit to the post below: "The Mongols? So...what you are saying is you are very much like them: large, mighty and prosperous at the time, but will be no longer in the future?"

Godulan Puppet #2, RPing as technologically advanced tribal society founded by mongols and vikings (and later with multiple other Asian and Native American cultures) motivated by an intrinsic devotion to the spirit of competition. They'll walk softly, talk softly, and make soothing noises as they stab you in the back and take your stuff... unless you're another Caleshan, whereupon they'll only stab you in the back figuratively!

Used NS stats: Population. That's it. Anything else not stated in the factbooks is not used.

"Ah, Germans...my American friends don't say much good things about them, even if they employ some of them. That's also true of the Soviets I've met, can't blame 'em, the German government before went crazy with their little eastward Manifest Destiny, but that says a lot about the German inferiority complex. Must be a drain trying to impose an outdated imperial order while living in the middle of a highly competitive and overly crowded region, innit? To be fair, that's a recurring trait among the landlocked people of Earth, and not just the Germans, trapped in a little civilization-level Pyramid Scheme, always fighting for resources. Luckily, we Anhu have no neighbors and we'd consider the duties of 'enlightening' others under our rule to be a drain...or, uh, more than half of us, myself included.

Let's see, what else, Mr. Oswald? You're also a monarch! OK, If I'd have assumed you were a man of your times before, this information only doubles my assumption. You were born inside an institution more or less meant to be an anchor for politics, culture and the like. Eh, it's OK, as long as you don't point your primitive...technologically speaking...nuclear spear-tips at us. I don't get monarchs and I don't get people who aren't interested in getting some help with planning certain things about their economies, but I think progress depends a lot on one's perspective; even if I'm unimpressed by those who claim divine right when that isn't much tangible. Or family dramas, I hate those, why involve billions into that? But eh, you could be far far worse as a ruler and I'm sure you're a decent human being, at an individual level. "

Remember that flying saucer with strange lights you saw hovering over the sky?

Of course you don't. That never happened. And if it did, it was Venus.

A fellow Legend of Zelda nation? I really have no option but to take this post, now do I?

Princess-Sovereign of Hyrule, Zelda

"By Hylians light! You are certainly not a sight I would expect, General. Forgive me for saying this, but that armour, though you claim to be from the realm of which we both reside within seems quite... Otherworldly, as a matter of fact. I must be honest and describe how the pointed nature of that Golden helmet of which you wear makes me shudder, though you may not see it... It is all too reminiscent of the monster that was the previous Monarch of Twilight, the king of whom sought the assimilation of the grand realm of light under the darkness of the Twilight..."

It is unfortunate for me to say this, but nevertheless you do not seem to convey any motivation, personality or action that would suggest that you are noticeably different from the defeated Twilight King. I

must iterate
that I find your story truly
confusing,
General Onox.
How is it that you claim to rule many a part of my realm yet never have I heard of a man such as yourself, nor your cronies like that Aerolfos
looking creature or the selfish Rippon whom has betrayed Hylia's trust by resulting herself to a life of banditry. I must not be able to come to any conclusion
than, and I try not to say such hostile statements often, that you are a fool.
One that,
despite your...

managed to members, one creature and one Hylan to your...

Strange cult of acting as if you have something that you do not.
Nevertheless,
it is truly good for Hyrule that your fantasy of ruling our lands has not come true...
Your band of bandits would only bring ruin to Hyrule's fair lands through brutality, homicide and selfishness amongst many others. You call yourself General, yet I must resort to calling you a selfish, and foolish man as I have yet to see any signs that you may be redeemable, as much as I attempt to look for that in anyone I meet.

I would like to warn you that if you, or the twisted Aerolfos and the selfish Riphon dare show your face to the realm, I will personally command Hyrule's armies to either detain or dispatch the lot of you. Your aspirations for causing suffering to Hyrule's people must not be allowed to occur. I hope you may see the light, and turn to a more honourable lifestyle, and if that becomes the case I will be happily surprised. I apologise to you, and myself that I see no future where that will happen, however."

OOC: Just a little clarification: While the Onox here does indeed stem from your Hyrules Timeline(the child one where twilight princess happens), the Hyrule he invaded wasn't the one where the Twili were defeated and Vaati was vanquished, he invades the one from the Fallen Hero Timeline, whose Onox was slain.

Prince of the Zora, Ralis

"Well, hello to you Anatoly... That's an interesting name, I must admit. Not something that no Hylian, nor Zora would call themselves, I can tell you that! Nevertheless, that's understandable, as like the others that I have seemed to stumble across as of recent, you don't even come from Hyrule, and most certainly not our humble Domain! That's a pretty obvious fact, though considering your alien get-up, I'd assume it to be so even in the eyes of the Humans that actually inhabit these lands, and that... Strange contraption on your back? What's it supposed to do exactly, that wood and metal thing with that cylindrical object attached underneath? I'm probably better off not knowing, and anyways, I am getting rather side tracked here, so allow me to move on...

I find it interesting that though we look completely different to one another, our stories kinda line up against each other in some ways... I mean, I can't claim to be going through your situation that you find yourself in, and thank Hylia's blessed light for that! After all, I try to be optimistic even in the light of trouble, but that's quite easy for me to say, sitting as the Sovereign over the Zora, as much as I still believe that I am certainly not the most qualified to be doing so. But you, Anatoly seem only to be still in the midst of trouble and woes, and for that I feel like I should apologise on your behalf.

Those few weeks in Kakariko Village that I had proved to be one of the worst I ever experienced.
Depression
dominated there, I felt as if I had let my mother down,
and my fellow Zora in addition. What point was there to even fight on, only to see the Twilight stay without a force to oppose it, knowing that I'd never be able to help the Zora in the way of which I was entrusted...
Well, as history
had proven my pessimistic thoughts at the time proved to be for nothing,
and I must thank the divines for that.
Unfortunately,
it seems that you cannot say the same. You have yet to meet that one person who would bring the painful world around you away, rather you are surrounded by forces that would seek to keep you in that awful loop.
This is why
when I'd find out that, yes indeed you hold some hope for the future of your realm, I can only say bravo! Like, you suffer through so much yet you try to hold onto a belief that one day, this may be over. This is also why you don't abandon everything about your life before, like your faith for instance. Trust me Anatoly, if anyone can bring light to whatever darkness your world is going through, it's whatever divine inhabits your world, I promise you that.

I have already seen the end of my woes, and it is my hope that you will too.

Anyways, I feel like I should continue. I notice that for all your blathering about "her", this Yu... Oh by Hylia's light, here we go again. How should I say it, Yunru? Did I say it correctly? Anyways, for all the talk criticizing this character I feel like it would be better for you if you looked out for number one first, yes? Because the way I see things, you may be on the path to becoming like "her", something of which you actually realise yourself! So at least you aren't in denial, which is very good! Because let's be real, you are fearful of a lot, and apparently that's what drove "her", as you refer to her as to madness... I hope that you may keep your sense of hope, and your belief in those above us with you, they may prove to be the only barriers stopping you from going mad yourself, no?

Know that, by the guiding light of the deities of which exist within your world will, things will be made right again. Though they may never say how they wish to bring solace to their people below, it is the reason of which they exist and they will help out their creations, okay?

I would actually enjoy to talk more in your company, Anatoly...

However, I believe we both most definitely have our duties, perhaps you much more than me. I hope that what I said may help in your troubles, though I will never claim to be as influential to you as Link was to me. I might've been wrong in everything I said, but there's always more harm in being silent than being potentially wrong, I think.

Be safe, Anatoly... May Hylia and the Spirits of Light bless you with the power to. Well, keep on going."
