"We have parsed over the account of ĩ arāns' life and our opinion on him is mixed. On one hand he is a coward, refusing to fight in a conflict which would plunge his nation into civil war and the deposition his father. He has also made a massive misstep in binding his power to a piece of paper and letting Parliamentarians into the political ecosystem of his nation. While primitive, an absolutist monarch can be very good for the people, granted that they are competent; constitutional monarchs however allow for the cancer which is republicanism to spread into a nation and the corruption and tribalism that often follows. On the other hand, his rise to power indicates that he may very well be smarter than he would initially let on and ĩ arāns seems to have a very genuine desire to protect his people which we can respect, even if currently he is going about it in the wrong way. We believe that ĩ arāns could have been a very good leader, but as of now we cannot say that we think that he is. Perhaps one day he will see his folly, but we don't think that day has come quite yet."

"Paramount might be a competent and strong leader, and his army might be as advanced as it's cunning and dangerous... An army of lions led by a lion. And yet we will never succumb to his rule, no matter what! We knew, that one day, the oppressors will come for us and we must be ready. This day had come. Something we always named as the Epic Battle, for which we have prepared. I was negative on him even without his war against us, and now, I wanna see him destroyed, with his head being put on a display as a proof of our collective resolve, courage and martial excellence. Either way, he and his army will never have Earth as long as we fight.

He came to kill, enslave and despoil our people and to destroy all life on Earth and so, he invoked the fury of all our people! This is not even a war in the name of freedom, this is war for our very existence and I will not flinch at the face of his army. I don't know, who the hell screwed up and let him become what he is, but I know, that Earth shall be the graveyard for his empire, like Afganistan was a graveyard for empires. There, he shall face a humiliating defeat.

By the way, no... this war will not change our perspective on the sapient Als. After all, the leader of Neoners is a sapient Al himself, and he shows devotion in fighting against the invasion. Besides... According to our more individualistic approach to crimes, it's Paramount and his goons, who are responsible for this, not sapient Als. Either way, I feel, that certain model of Skoda car might become less popular after this war..."-Shawn Bjornson

I see... So this woman effectively went to war, fought for her freedom... And yet, she somehow managed to weasel into a deal where nothing changes for her people, save for added liberties and support from the ruling powers? I must say, her luck is either that extreme or she is quite dedicated to keeping the status quo. I'm not at all disgusted by her actions, in spite of the blood that stains her record, given it was for a sound cause. I do however question her loyalty to her people. Is she truly fighting for them? Did she really liberate them? Or did she simply turn into a puppet for Inogo to abuse at a later time? As it does seem like she is the weakest link in the chain, easily exploited with a little convincing that it's for the greater good. What a shame.

Inogo Estima: Now hold it dear comrade but I got questions to ask here. Aren't you a monarch at this point? You might as well attend the queen's wedding at this point and go to some royal ball with those poshly dressed bourgeoisie looking, wine sipping, pale-skinned rich aristocrats, you'll fit right in.

Ok let's take a page from the communist manifesto? Wait is it that book? Idk but Marxists like to talk about class consciousness. Sounds like your nation doesn't have enough of it. I wouldn't suggest you invade non-socialist countries for it since they are not socialist for a reason you know? Forcing socialism to a non-socialist country is asking for trouble. Think about it, the people won't like it, it's going to give socialism a bad rep and make more people go against socialism. I like my socialism like my tea, natural.

Bloody hell you almost got assassinated, and the power struggles, why can't you and your rivals just let the people choose who gets to be elected. Like someone once said, absolute power corrupts absolutely. Its like putting your nation on the edge of a cliff, one stray boulder is all it takes for everything to come crashing down. Foremost leader, who answers to nobody? Not even the people? Bloody hell mate here we go again.

Nuclear War as a revolutionary method, you might as well jump out the window since it's revolutionary. Oh yeah, the fact that the child that tried to talk to you got dragged away since his parents are so scared of your parents says something about your government. It ain't better than the liberal capitalist, consumerist, decadence thing that you're fighting against.

However, maybe I shouldn't be too harsh on you. Maybe there's something I'm missing, maybe the capitalists in your world are way worse than those in mine. Comrade, if you need help, call me. If you have a problem, we can try to solve it together, if you want to build up class consciousness, we can do it without resorting to violence. It's never too late to fix your mistakes. I don't want this to be the start of war between our two socialist nations, I want us to learn from each other, tell me what I am missing here.

James Oliver: I broke my keyboard typing all of that! Inogo I did not know you're a bloody therapist! Ahem, as for you Mister Turanski, I'm going to add a suggestion here. Maybe consider trying to live as a regular proletariat for a few months? Could give you a new perspective you know?

"Of the many long and strange stories the Bureau of Barbarians have spun, the tale of the strange barbarians who ride a steed of iron automata is perhaps the most ridiculous. Apart of me questions if these stories are mere fabrications meant to make me a fool, or if my age has finally caught up with me and has spun these weird ideas in my mind. Either way I feel a compulsion to give my thoughts on the leader of these barbarians, what sort of man is this Shawn Bjornson exactly?

I am unable to make much sense of the nuances in regards to his battles, only that he had fought within the near east against what I presume to be against some sort of brigands, some Turkomen perhaps? Either way he is an apparent hedonist, something I personally cannot condone, but it is to be expected of a wandering barbarian. Either way he must have some degree of competency if completing his peoples customary trials had allowed him to ascend to the ranks of their tribes leadership, I will not be so conceited to presume they are incapable of having standards.

It would appear that this Bjornson had made a name for himself, wherever his armies goes he conquers, and not by merely being a brute either, but by being smart, like us. He sows dissent within a realm he seeks to conquer, bringing discord to their lands before sweeping away all resistance, decimating the old ruling class and reorganizing his conquered lands. Under his rule he stamped out the prior corruption eating away at the masses, and emancipated the people of his new realm. His efforts to increase his lands fertility is to be admired and efforts to educate his people is something to be admired.

I would say that for a hedonist pagan, he has a good set of core morals that will surely bring prosperity for his vast domain. His loyalty to his people is commendable, and they are no doubt in good hands under his reign, he will no doubt go on to conquer even more lands for his growing empire, and with a man of such conviction I hope it will last a long time. Besides the faults I already have with the man, his barbarous nature, his heathenism, his love for the excesses in life without moderation... I do admire his desire to bring prosperity to his people, free from the tyranny of the indifferent and mutually immoral. I would be most interested in meeting this person if ever given the chance, he seems to be a fairly interesting fellow to talk to, if nothing else my Son would find some companionship given his weakness to spirits and women."

So who do I have to give my opinion on now. Its some human lady with a weird picture. Why do only your eyes have color? And why does the plane in the background have a different artstyle? Oh well lets read your bio. So... Jeane Valentine Sabre... So apparently you were born on probably Earth. Your siblings joined the United States Armed Forces, so you're from a pretty military family. I can relate do that, I also knew a lot of people with a military background... but that's probably because of conscription. Then you became a teacher to teach the newer generations the values of... I don't really know what your values are. Apparently something with democracy, socialism, capitalism and populism.. I'm only really familiar with democracy. Its the system of governance that the Federal Union and Xuunay has.

Then you became part of the USAF where you flew some planes until you end up flying bombers. I myself am not really familiar with air or space warfare. I was a foot-soldier not a pilot, but anyway. So then you bombed a training base because of "total military annihilation" which seems to me as something that totally wouldn't escalate in any way. After that you were sent to Spain because... reasons where you got further radicalized by whatever your values are. Then you joined the CPUSA moderate wing which made you enter politics. No idea what the CPUSA is, but I'll see.

So in politics you try to radicalize the youth, just like how Devqir is trying to radicalize the youth, so I don't see this ending well. You then decided to become president which you eventually do. Like I said again, I don't see this ending well. So as president you tried to get rid of the military-industrial complex and implemented new laws which led to more police raids. I hope that you know what you are doing because this will not end well. Especially with your anti-terrorism policies and E-PATRIOT act. Of course your population became angry. Luckily, unlike certain other people, you realized that you became unpopular and set up a new healthcare bill.

So what I've learned from you is that you have some dangerous ideas, at least you recognized that you made a mess and tried to fix it, which makes you better than any leader of my "country." Meanwhile your ideology... I still don't really understand what communism or socialism is, but you are really passionate about it, which is commendable. I myself don't really have a lot of ideals except making sure that his hellstate collapses the right way. But maybe I should also go in exile and leave this place to its fate.

"Oh ho hooooo you poor dear. I can't even begin to imagine what it must be like serving under that certifiable madsquid, watching your people descend unto ignominy and madness in roughly equal measure, and focusing solely on limiting the damage done. Such a leader would never have arisen to prominence among our kind, as they would have taken an unexpected flying leap long before it came to that. It takes a special kind of patience to work under such draining conditions, and it speaks well for you to weather such abuse as you have done, but I would daresay that you're beating yourself up too much.

"Your 'friends' decisions are neither your responsibility nor your fault. They've chosen their path, and fallen prey to echo chambers that only serve to amplify their most hateful impulses unto the point of infinite recursion. That's nothing you could have helped, and you should not punish yourself for failing to do so. My hope is that you can find some measure of peace in this, but I also hope that you can find some means of correcting the source of your problems. There are cases in which death can be a mercy. My kind know this quite well..." -Cala Azzakrat Deep Kraken

Perhaps upon first impression I should congratulate them for being if nothing else, honest about themselves, although perhaps they should have continued to dance around their actual so called profession, to this end I question their intellect. A styled varangian, willing to do whatever to accomplish her mission, I ask you this, where do you draw the line of necessity? Kaoma Haishi: You know we have quite a lot in common. A liking for civic nationalism and infrastructure projects. Especially the whole cooperation between Christians and Muslims thing because not that many countries can succeed in that department before tearing themselves apart and resulting in places of worship blowing up. While I was not involved in the development of civic nationalism in Sherechia, I did experienced it first hand, being half Sosnogorskian (Russian) and Orthodox in a mostly Tsatnak faith country, it's nice to know you are not a second class citizen.

Now as for infrastructure, no high-speed trains! Haha no I'm not going to judge you on that. Considering you had to build aqueducts and such. I'm guessing prior to your rule, most citizens don't even have toilets so congratulations I guess for making your country a more sanitary place. Y'all must have learned a lesson or two from the plagues

Kai Tsoufan: like you, not just the whole civic nationalism thing, but also how you delegated power to the people. An early practitioner of democracy I guess though you are still a mostly absolute monarch and unlike me you actually managed to develop your country by a substantial amount especially in the technological and industrial sectors.

"This Windham fella seems like a terrific guy, very very terrific. He's incredibly humble, he's hard working, and he's a skilled guy at managing his people. If we could work out a trade deal where me and him meet together in person I'm sure me and him would have a lot of things in common. Not to mention how advanced his people are technologically, and I'm sure he and his people will continue prospering. Again, great guy, I'd give an arm and a leg to meet him"

Hmm... this Tsofan guy seems like the kind of person I'd want working for me. An excellent diplomat for sure. I could use someone like him to help unite all of the tribes that sprung up post-enhancement. Wouldn't put him in charge of industry, though. We need to advance faster than that.

Yikes. Not military either. Definitely an excellent choice for diplomat, though.
