I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

You expect Porcupine Tree to sound light?

Don't Let Go - The Rasmus

This song is only bearable because it is on a great album.

Not really:) Steven Wilson is known for being dark....which I love. Not to say they don't have their happier songs (Piano Lessons), and Blackest Eyes doesn't sound that massively dark (not sure about lyrically), again, despite the name. At least, in the chorus.

How much Porcupine Tree have you heard?

Well, their album "Fear of a Blank Planet", which was on sale once. Bought it, liked it, bought the live album Warsawa, which is okay, but I prefer the other one. I am a big fan of vinyl and CDs, but it's hard to find some stuff sometimes.
