From the Imperial Palace.

My personal thoughts regarding Her Imperial Majesty the 100th Empress of the Holy Britannian Empire, Nunnally vi Britannia

"Mein Gott, eine junge Frau who has also suffered a traumatic incident in her years as a child, and she was blinded as a result? Her mother was killed in a hail of gunfire when her children are present?! Who is so willing to kill a mother in front of her children like this!" Not only this but she has went through so much tribulation. She became a Viceroy in one of the most tumultuous areas of her father's empire, what kind of father allows one of his youngest children to be in charge of such a colony? If I had children of my own, appointing them to rule

"Of course you're casual, Ms. Hinote! I can see your pink underwear!"

Anyways...what to review. Well, it's saddening to know you lost your Mom. Like that, so violently, I mean. It must suck for anybody. You must carry an important burden now that your grandmother, the former Empress, has passed as well. Teenagers really are 'Adults-in-Training'; I should know this lesson fully from my own youthful failures. That being said, though I can relate to you on some things, I'm also an appointed representative of the Anhu and of Air Fleet, what the Committee says goes...so to say. Sure I get the flexibility to decide some things, to tell the bosses to reconsider things, but ultimately, my people entrust a group of qualified experts to make decisions that fit like hand in glove. A demarchy is vastly different to a monarchy in that regard.

Personally, I've always been a little cautious around monarchy. Most don't explicitly designate skill and efficiency to deliver set results as their main virtue. I'm not saying monarchs can't be great leaders...but...those institutions...eh...don't put all your eggs in one basket, Miss Hinote. If you really are the People's Princess, your old structure will have to go."

AN: What do we have here? Oh, hey! Mr. Ansar, the Giant Elliot Ness, right?

Anti-Corruption can really be like draining an ocean with a bendy-straw, can it? Under conventional means, with flesh and blood admins. There's something really admirable about men of action, isn't there? Sheer will, superhuman in fortitude and spurred by true love and communitarian goodwill, going up against all odds to reform. Or eusocial yet self-serving reform, if one is cynical about it. If I were you, I'd consider incorruptible help in the form of AI...maybe not for everything, but hey, it's wasteful to not use tools at hand. Or if not that then, eh, I dunno...continue doing what you do because it works. I mean, you haven't been assassinated. Yet. Good luck with your efforts, but most importantly, your power-base."

"Well, the question of whether we are alone is a question still unanswered in our world, though we have discovered microbial life in Europa and remnants of life in Mars. Still, we have yet to find any signs of complex life or civilizations out there, though the Copernicus spaceship has been sent by us at the RCAS to Proxima Centauri b, a century after signs of an atmosphere have been discovered. Hopefully, the robotic expedition will determine if the planet has complex life or not. Considering my interactions with the multiverse, I guess life existing in other worlds is an inevitability."

Anyways, what we're dealing here are not aliens, but instead an oddly evolved race of humans from an alternate timeline. The ramifications of interdimensional travel, depending on the methodology, could cause huge issues for the Fermi paradox, but that's besides the point. What interests me is their racial characteristics. Nova in particular seems to paint a picture of the Anhu as being pale-skinned Orientals, similar to the Japanese but paler. Perhaps, the Anhu were northern Asians or even a hybrid of Caucasian and Asiatic peoples. This would fit with their society being highly collectivist and undemocratic. Though, unlike the Chinese of my timeline, they wholeheartedly practice a form of communism as oppose to statist capitalism, albeit without the concept of workers self-management like which had prevailed in the Western world with the Occidental revolutions of the early 22nd century.

I do find it interesting that the United States and USSR have entered into a sort of Cold War, around half a century before the three-way Cold War of the 21st century of my world. Perhaps, it was because of different leadership, as Malenkov had pushed for better relations with the West.

Anyways, onto Nova herself, I honestly don't find her too interesting. She seems like a run of the mill 'Spacer' who by a freak accident crashed into Earth and took an interest in Earth culture during her time in Roswell. Wait, Roswell? Well, I don't think we have Anhu in our world considering that we overthrow the US government and none of them really came down to inform us about it. Whatever. So yeah, I guess she at least notices the issues with excessive collectivism, though I think her assessment of the 1950s American as a 'vapid individualist' is kind of wrong. America ironically was at the height of government intervention and patriotism at the time. I could go on and on about the high union membership and tax rates on the wealthy, but that would distract us further from Nova herself. She's kind of smug, though I guess she does come from an advanced civilization. Though, how advanced they are is a mystery to me. After all, humanity in my timeline has habitats all over Earth and Moon orbit with some in asteroids. There are a few cloud colonies on Venus as well. So, sit tight, Nova. Non-Anhu humans are on their way to colonizing the solar system, just as the white man colonized the New World during the latter half of the last millennium.

Wait a second, Doo-Wop music? The fuck is that? Let me check what it is...Oh, this bitch is going full noble savage mode! The fucking **** music! Seriously?! Out of all the rich music produced by the peoples of Earth, you chose congo jungle ***** music?! You might as go to Africa itself and listen to the shrieking of a chimpanzee and call it music!

Okay, I got to calm down...Uh, I guess we could genetically engineer people with cat ears in our world too. Hell, we're practically immortal and can just make new bodies on the fly, so I can be a cat person tomorrow. Hell, I'll do it right now! One for the white man. Zero for the pale Asian Doo-Wop lover. Hell yeah."

Whats worse here is that his ideas am't contained in his nation but will affect other nations as well as he views the 3rd world... you know... US with hostility. You know the 2nd world doesn't sound so bad anymore.

It terrifies me to see how corporatist US could forge such an extreme individual, a reminder that the American Dream... is a dream and nothing more."

"Lil' Pickett dude is so petty sometimes, and not only in terms of physical size, he is so fussy and sensitive about someone's melanin level, that this is just like some comedy. Just wanna prank him. Have some black dude cook his favorite food as best as possible, and then after he finishes it, reveal, that it was cooked by a black dude. Oh, his face would be priceless! That notion, that "Black people cannot embrace democracy", what sort of pseudoscience is this? And for some reason, despite beliving in his nonsense, he seems to be rather competent leader with many good ideas! This gives me a severe case of cognitive dissonance. Theories about being bullied by non-whites are debunked, so why does he belvie that? I mean, in white nationalism makes no sense among his other views, especially transhumanist one. After all, robots loaded with human consciousness can be painted any color. Besides, white is a mix of all colors. He is such a mystery, which is why on our rating of relations, I am gonna put him into "This is complicated" section and call it a day. He is not exactly friend or enemy, and half of the council disapproves him. And his first world arrogance might put us on hostile relations, if he decides, that we are "Third world". -Shawn Bjornson

"Kai? He is much like our First Leader Seth, the one, who led the revolution and united the factions, there are minor differences, like Seth was more pro-liberty, but given the situation, that's nothing. Then, after revolt, he had to deal with corruption and inefficiency, rather usual things in many cases of transition, and this is not his fault. Economies also do stagnate or recess after such events too. Most of his "Failings" are just post-revolution syndrome, which fixes itself in some time, and it's definitely far better than their old government, that's for sure. I wonder, how does one measure his karma track? And what is the afterlife really is? I think, that I will not become an enlightened spirit, I'll enter the Valhalla halls after death. Or maybe not? The afterlife affair is complicated, and it's almost impossible to study." -Shawn Bjornson

I like have Reo DXXVII is brave, and how she takes down enemy armies. But what I like less of is how she raids territories, executes their leaders, and forces their people into slavery. So combining victories with ruthlessness, it goes without saying she is the Napoleon Bonaparte of her time."

RESPONSE FROM THE INSTITUTE

"He calls others savage, yet he is the one who was raised by failures who abandoned him. He is the one who was a mere street thug who forsake the higher forms of education to run a petty criminal organisation. And above all he is the one who fell to fantasy stories of a bygone era. Yes, yes, they have their so-called magic, yet they only call it magic because none of them has ever tried to truly understand it. It's religious trappings are only a way for the powerful to remain in power, to withhold the use of that magic from the lower classes.

Returning to Ansar, I would be lying if I said I have no respect for the man. For once, his dossier is genuinely interesting. And even if I despise his xenophobic isolationism, the man seems devoted to give his people a better life, clamping down on the parasites which plague the political class, giving some help to the lower classes by lowering the housing price, etc. However, my opinion of him is still fairly negative."

However it is my utmost concern that the Chairman could be corrupted by his drive to better the lives of his people with the authority he wields, possibly disrupting civil rights and human rights which we believe should be the foremost concern for all leaders with absolute or near-absolute power."

The Queen of the Loys: "I admire the Chairman's dedication to scientific advancement, which is a priority I share. I must advise, though, that attempting to scientifically improve human beings and the human body may lead to deeply Orwellian circumstances within your borders which would defeat the purpose of your efforts to increase your people's quality of life."

"Ah, a glorious tale of the Great Ginger King saving the save and manipulating the lower brass to betray the fowl Dictator whatshisface and replace him with the Ginger as the King of Loysville. Which I find to be a red herring as the country shares his name, and thus makes the character seem like he has an inflated view about himself. But in any case, I love it. I will enjoy reading the next page. If the Author plans on writing more about the Ginger, instead of pulling an Ateria and leaving it with a summary."

Ok, so who do we have here... some kind of person called Brapture. So according to his character file he is the author of the Alkdorverse. Wait? Alkdorverse? Is he the god of the dimension where Alkdorian is in? I never had to give my opinion on a god, but alright. Here it says that you not only the god and author over the Alkdorverse, but also over the Zeffarverse. One thing that I think is kinda interesting is how they are called Alkdorverse and Zeffarverse, like you made entire universe's centered on just one nation in it. You also talked about the omniverse and the NS community, no idea what kind of community that is, but it does make me wonder if my universe has a god or author, if it does, then I have one important question for them: Why the hell do you have to bring me through a lot of weird crap, couldn't you just give me a normal regular life? Anyway, according your file, you like law and order, which I have to disagree with, because these kind of people are the most likely to be a bunch of killjoys. Overall, you do seem kinda like a nice person... maybe... I don't know. You did create a bunch of villains for your universe because you thought making them was more fun, which I can understand, there is no shame in having some fun.

My personal thoughts regarding Coalition Leader Leo Berge

"I...do not know exactly what I want to say about this 'Leo Berge'. A person like him with such a convoluted story is so unlikely to become a leader, but he happens to be one even after all the odd series of events that had happened to him. And to be honest if I were to meet him in person, I'd mistake him for a regular civilian due to his appearance here in this photo. And truly I say this, I personally condemn his imprudence by joining a gang of criminals because they were... 'cybermetically enhanced'? That is a strange term. Yet still, that is a stupid thing to do when a man puts his life on the line by asking to join a criminal syndicate."

He is a good friend, and a decent person, but that he can be a cold-blooded killer, and he is aware of that. He knew it is required to keep Germania intact through the Great War, and that was a good thing. He doesn't see himself a hero, but rather a mistake, a murderer, a thief, and a desperate defender, and everything his foes come to despise and fear.

News: Days after the coronation of Queen Rose I, fifteen Senators have mysteriously vanished after returning to the Capital from a conference in Christine City. Among them is Phillip "Fighting Phil" Paddock, the Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who at 98 is the eldest member of the current Senate. President Hinterland issued a short statement of support, joined by Her Majesty the Queen, as the government has executed a number of orders to prioritize the search for the Senators.

"Dobrosławski, eh? Shame I never took Polish classes, could've made this a lot more interesting. But oh well. What can I say about Borzysław? He's a man of few words, and even fewer virtues. He's seen more in 26 years than a lot of people see in their entire lifetime. I can't begin to imagine how horrible it must feel to have to fight in a civil war at such a young age. While it's true that his experiences acted as a revolutionary catalyst for his military aptitude, it still can't be easy. But I give the man credit, he's a hell of a fighter, and a skilled officer, and that's essentially where my praise ends."

"It really doesn't matter which way you try and spin it, this man is a textbook doppelgänger for all the terrible despots in modern history, from the Kim dynasty to Thatcher, even when considering his so-called 'good' intentions. I'm a firm believer in fair justice and the presumption of innocence, but let's face it, he's a bona fide war criminal, and should be imprisoned. I don't care how good he is at chess, he's dangerous, and I sincerely hope that he receives the convictions he deserves."
