Hm, a woman of the sword, how curious to a women carry the blade in such a time where woman were send as only objects to produce an heir, and keep their owner in good company. Quite curious, indeed. Otherwise, during these times people were forbidden to practice a certain religion that did not conform to the state religion, and even with this small alteration when it comes to the role of women in this universe. It seems this Queen still shows that savagery in slaughtering your fellow countrymen simply because they don't believe in the same fairy tale as you do. And because of this, my stance is negative and I do wish to see the day, the Queen finds herself at the stake, if the Pagans win.

We are great guys actually, just more relaxed and fun, that's all! At least, chance of war is minimal. Skyhooked is not on the list of his strategic priorities, and we don't plan on attackin' first, as it would be a foolish move. Both tactically and strategically. Mortals like him, amuse me. They love coming up with must ridiculous excuses to deny the existence of other entities in the multiverse. As he believes me a wizard, which I will not dispute with him. He's cute in that silly bubble he lives in, and it would be terrible to see that cuteness be destroyed by him facing the reality, he's been hiding himself from. And there's other consequences too, if I did. Otherwise, getting back on topic, the King is a relatively genuine monarch, who could do better for his people, if he wasn't willing to secede his power to end up as a glorified figurehead. But if he thinks that's the best way to improve his nation, go for it. That's your chose and I'm not the type to intervene in the destines that their creators have planned for them.

The rest of the world calls him "the bookkeeper", and he is given many names. From him we learn what it is to be human. From him we learn why we are here on this Earth in the first place. The world needs heroes, and he seems to provide the ideal candidates for them. He came from nothing, but achieved greatness through hard work and dedication. He had nothing else to feed on, and that is why he had toiled in the mines of Mora. While walking with the rich and powerful of the world and underworld, he helped to build the cities and infrastructure that would serve as a model for the region to follow. As the years went by, so did their deaths toll. As the years came by, so did this 'bookkeeper' live still. At the end of the rainbow bridge, where the tide had turned to blue, he laid his head and appears to inwardly cry out in anguish.

"Ah. the giant-blooded, aristocratic plebeian, walking contradiction. There is much here to adore, and much here likewise to despise. With pleasant regards, I find is means very agreeable, but end goals of a socialist society is something which must be opposed with force. Hereditary monarchy, elite landowners, cosmopolitanism, and feudalism are the cornerstones of a proper, civilized society. As my divine ancestor before me, the great god Illustris Rex, united the land under sword, flame, and strategic alliance, I will stand steadfast against the unwashed mob rule of these socialists. Either way, I doubt, that we gonna have a common interest. And if I see even one assassin from Ignis State, attemptin' to end my life... he's not gonna return from Skyhooked alive.”-Shawn Bjornson

Quite an interesting development, I see. I didn't know that Zen is not a fan of transgenders. Still, maybe that's just his views, and he won't be too hard on the transgenders, if you know what I mean. If worse come to worse, and he is being a little bit more... Hitler-esque, I will see if I can ask him what's up. For now, you and him, are still friends to me! Keep spreading the positivity around, my friend! I hope to see you around, and I also hope that we won't have any wars in-between against others, you know? Wars are a waste of time, am I right? See ya!

(Oh for fuck's sake, I hate this PENDING thing!)

Valentijn "De Sierlijke en Vrij Valkyrie General ov Valentine Z" [Samantha Maxwell Delta Weston Stijn Angelus Tracey Mitchell Tristian Marnix Svitw. Lewis Hyatt X. As someone whose face is damaged by radiation, I must say, I got a miracle for not being as ugly as you are. Huh, if only you know about what your previous incarnations said to me... anyway, what is about you, you ask? What do I think of you? Is it going to be a positive? Am I ready to shove a cactus up my spine? Neither! So... no, I am not going to be too positive on you anytime soon. The hair style, the rose, the wine... you remind me of myself when I was 13, and I hated that phase. Thank goodness that was over. That aside, nah. I am only going to give you the respect that you deserve, and that is that at least you got a good place running there. The city's something that I would love to visit if it is not run by a lunatic and his criminal son. I might call off the war, only to stop embarrassing you that you might lost to pacifists. You are doing the deed of Death, something that the world already has one of, and Gwen is certainly not happy that you get to cull who you think are "degenerates". The more I look at you, the more disgusted I truly am.

"Ah, sì. Here we have un caso particolare. Un uomo che justified his actions during a bloody conflict by thinking that it was the best option to defend la sua gente, until he found out that his own people started the mess that, in ultimo analisi, he continued. When asking per la morte as a punishment, he was instead given una possibilità di redenzione by leading, as un uomo militare, to avoid falling into azioni militare. Truly a quest of its own, and I, personalmente, think I wouldn't have lasted long. So far he has done grandemente, and I can only wish buona e continua fortuna upon him. Onwards and upwards, signore"
