As for his decision to rebuild his nation's church from the fire I support, a people of a country deserve a place of worship to God. He means well politically—to advocate for equal rights of man and basic human rights—but him supporting 'pro-choice' is one thing I show disdain for, albeit in honesty and emphatically."

"Oswald I is a very good leader for his country given the time period it exists in. While he is possessed of a few old-fashioned and perhaps unenlightened values and beliefs, this is perfectly understandable given the background of his civilization and perhaps beneficial as this improves the cohesion within his society. On the whole, his progressive views on racial equality and his practical approach to the war effort he finds himself at the helm of are the hallmarks of a species that is learning how to make itself better. I have lived for thirty million years, and when these people make their first extragalactic expeditions, I will almost certainly still be there to remember their heritage - and this man will serve as proof that they were very much worthy of their success. I have nothing left to do but hope they discard their imperialistic and expansionist outlook, if at least for a pacifist version."

Oswald's Mood: Temporarily Staid

"These two honour me with their sympathies as I reign over this great nation, it is stupid on my part to overlook them. They prove themselves to be excellent fighters on the battlefield which I also cannot overlook. But I hold plenty of questions in regards to the designation of their unit...and I to say I am not okay with it is underemphasizing how much I loathe seeing the arrangement of number six in three decimal places (that is the number '666') which is all too synonymous with the Devil. But as much as I would make it an issue, it would be pointless and so I will leave it up to them to debate whether or not to change it to something less conspicuous. Oh, and what is this? Ah yes, this is information in their involvement in their Second World War. ...Zweiter... WAS." -His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald!

Oswald's Mood: Muddled

"His heart is in the right place, it is his support to allow for an uncusomary practice of marriage—a notion by the people who claim they are advocating for equality—that I still am not in the mood to give public support for. The concept of marriage is both simple and conventional, and, yes, to a degree, sacrosanct in a traditional sense. But again, King Christophe is a good man who believes he is doing the right thing for his country, it is his steps in the direction he's going, to giving his people what they want, that are going too far."

"This Oswald perplexes me. I see some good he has done, but such good usually gets cancelled out by some atrocious blunders he's also made. He rightfully crushes dissidents without mercy nor hesitation, a hallmark of a strong and competent ruler. Yet he also panders to useless minorities, which can be commonly seen as an indicator of weakness. Instead of working to improve the lives of his own race, he slavishly bends over backwards to serve inferior kinds whom his empire had already subjugated some time before. I shall and will never understand this detrimental policy that disadvantages ones own species in favor of benefitting foreign tribes. A wise ruler would do everything in his power to serve his own kin before extending his hand toward others. Ultimately it would seem that Oswald still has much to learn, and I'm not overly convinced that he will eventually see the error in his ways, with him being too headstrong to admit his mistakes. As it stands, his empire is a force of stagnation and obstacle to the development of his people, and I cannot truthfully state that I would be bothered if it collapsed, rather I might be pleased to hear of it."

"And they call me cut throat. I may be a warrior that will brutally defend his lands, but your a mobster that rules with an iron fist.

Lowblood hasnt seen that type of rule, if it ever does it'll be a shadow leader. But I doubt it ever will.

I like your style, but at the same time it disgusts me. As a warrior we have a sense of honor, we tend to look down on the enslavement of other races, I personally dont mind drugs but I wouldn't let them get out of hand where it brings the people down, as for other kings they might act a bit more harshly on the matter..

And personally you take over lands and work them to dust, that's something I've killed over. Something I've brutally murdered over. Something I personally look down on.

Even if I like the way you rule to an extent, I do not agree with the monster you have became." -The first king

Huh, nani?

AN: "Undead in Lowbloodian terms isnt so much a zombie but only an extent. Once an undead dies they resurrect. Now not all can do this only about every generation has about six scientists estimate.

But as you are brought back you slowly begin to hollow and wither away, a state that begins to eat away at the mind, yes. But I was at a state where I was rebirthed into existence.

As for Rapture, they killed our previous leader, enslaved our people, and put them to work in mines, tested on them, all against their will. Slandered the dead kings name and our lands. So I was obviously furious.

My people survived and Lowblood prospered. I gave the people the ability to fight by unlocking the tainted blood that resides in the populus, an ability that no king has had.

When one becomes a king their soul is tied to the lord soul. Kings exist in a rather spirit form. I was like this for longer than time can tell.

I hold the soul, it rejuvenates the body. And when your this close to it a veil forms, but when one thinks they are good enough to take my crown I dont use any abilities because I wish for a fair fight. A lord of souls must be fair or they are not worthy and tend to die quickly compared to those that earned it.

Even if you were to fight me, you might actually get a chance to see what I look like."-The first king

Nation - Low bloods
Leader - The First King

"huh, It feels a bit strange that I do not have an actual name to call him by. I guess by title it is then... anyway, the first king's history and ascension is quite interesting to say the least, also somewhat tragic considering how many seem to try and erase him over time. Nevertheless, while I do not really condone warfare, I can understand why he has opted to engage in it. He means well for his homeland, returning to have them rise up against those who abused the lands and people of Lowblood, and now trying to restore it to its former glory. Overall, i have no problems with him and wish him well with his endeavors."

Oswald's Mood: Contrary

"I did anticipate her outrage at my previous comment regarding her fellowship with communism and socialist economic practices, and frankly, I perceive her as rather ignorant to understand my anger against practitioners of communism and socialism. Her vision of a world of equals directed by a communist economy is living in the realm of fantasy; but I will allow her to look into the Russy Federation and how their communism is working there, maybe then she will see that all sorts of opposites—the Russy Federation and the Fatherland—will not cooperate well together as she claims in her previous updated statement."
