junta that ruled the country dictatorially for more than a quarter of a century. And after it all, it just circles back to a monarchy, albeit a liberal constitutional one. The revolution might as well never happen considering that the monarchy could be simply reformed to its current state.

Anyways, Gustav the IV really doesn't offer much room for an opinion, since he, like me, doesn't really govern the nation. Unlike me, he doesn't have an ideological history or a military background to talk about. I do oppose his monarchy, as I do all monarchies. I also think that the 'nation' should be balkanized to fit with the ethnic demographics of its various parts. Trying to appease various minorities only leads to resentment with the majority group. Of course, Switzerland and even my nation do offer exceptions to the rule, but even then this was only achieved through confederalism and a common civic identity. Majority rule is still respected within the local level.

Now, the use of plebiscites is a step up from normal liberal democracy, but I think it is a far more crude system of direct democracy than what exists in the RCAS. Ironically, it is more majoritarian, despite the government being pro-minority-rights. Still, deliberation is just as important to direct democracy as voting itself. Without some sort of citizen assembly or local town hall meeting, direct democracy becomes merely an apathetic mass voting on policies they know little about. The fact that plebiscites are barely even used shows the flaws of such a system.

Also, Gustav the IV looks like an eccentric billionaire who smokes crack and has a harem of prostitutes. That and making shitty anti-virus software. Sounds like the type of person who'd exist in the Pacific Commonwealth or Free Southwestern States before I saved the country.'

What I'm going to say, however, is that you are an incompetent leader - you believe that through the 'power of love' you will absorb every single piece of the former USSR, that everything will be fine and dandy. Let me tell you, mister, it will not be. As long as you continue oppressing those of dissenting viewpoints, such as the people who believe in the idea of free markets, as long as you reject any sort of dialogue with them and continue shunning them, they will build resentment, and that resentment will inevitably mark the collapse of your little Soviet experiment."

"Want me to tell you the harsh truth? Is that, in politics, you have to sometimes make tough decisions, and those tough decisions may sometimes include aligning with what you think - and rightly so - are repugnant people, like fascists. Your world is suffering. Your people are in poverty. You are supposed to unite everyone who inhabited the former Soviet Union, but instead of uniting them, you are dividing them via vague ideological notions and authoritarianism in the form of council communism. Arctic island inhabited by kitsune and other yōkai.

Set about a decade after the world becomes aware of the supernatural. Details on that will come later.

Slowly trying to rework the factbooks and write for this nation again. Sometimes I worry I'm bad at writing but I think I'm getting better

The High
Mistress seems to be an enlightening
kind, and has done well in keeping her people on the right spiritual path. That will
and probably has brought them greatness
and prosperity.
However, this way of governing will do nothing for my settlement
amongst a ruined world of snow and ice.
Only order,
obedience, and
severe
discipline can keep us from falling any further, and sustain only
moderate
prosperity in
the frozen hell,
we now call
home.
Otherwise my stance is positive.”
