When life gives you lemons, don't make lemonade. Make life take the lemons back! Get mad! I don't want your damn lemons, what the hell am I supposed to do with these? Demand to see life's manager! Make life rue the day it thought it could give Cave Johnson lemons! Do you know who I am? I'm the man who's gonna burn your house down! With the lemons! I'm gonna get my engineers to invent a combustible lemon that burns your house down!

It barely snows here anyway, so there is, in fact, no crime for it. It could be classified as an offensive installation if you emphasise the 'fort' part of it, which is a maximum of five years in prison, but other than that you're fine.

Depends on the type of public property. We can generally classify public property as 'used' and 'unused'. So, like, large forests that aren't nature reserves are owned by the government and are considered 'unused', so you can do what you like there. As for 'used' property, if its for resource harvesting or a nature reserve, you can ask for permission but will probably be denied. You won't face punishment unless it actually caused harm, but it would be destroyed and you would be removed.

As for public buildings like hospitals and government buildings, or even publicly owned factories or such, which are increasingly uncommon these days, the worst case is that it gets in the way of its purpose, and you get forcibly removed. If it isn't in the way of anything, you can go right ahead.

and I've been ninja'd.

depends on if its libel or misinformation. But generally its handled by the internet service and not the government. If its libel than that's a different situation.

Internationally pirating a piece of media made by the government (either an educational children show or a government broadcast or some sort of PSA)

Internet barely exists in Belsilia. Not due to some dystopian things, but because it's a bit hard and a bit strange to run a WWW in a post-apocalyptic world. Not a crime.

None really. They don't seem to be doing anything wrong. Also they are fellow Catholics.

AN did not specify a crime so I will write for AANs:

Go to jail. Go directly to jail. ~~Do not pass GO, do not collect $200.~~ Ranging from two to twelve years, varying based on the damages caused. If damage is minimal or none at all, 6 months. Jailed for [attempted] Destruction of Government Property (2-12 years depending on damages), and Recklessness (public endangerment) charges.

A small fine, if on a busy intersection than larger fine, if it causes an accident restitution to victims + property damage fines and if causes injury or death possible case of manslaughter meaning rehabilitation and time dilation prison for slightly over a day, equal to several years real time. Here in Stella Nera we use time dilation prisons as a more effective and faster method of punishment so we can progress more quickly as a nation and more effectively, the time dilation is done in cyberspace prisons where the human mind is connected to the cyber prison, and time relative to them occurs an incredibly many times in the cyberspace as their thoughts are transmitted at a much higher rate than in the real world, resulting in dilated time and less actual time required to complete sentences. We also have death simulators in which death is simulated to give an authentic death penalty without actually killing the offender. If the manslaughter was the case of a deliberate attempt to cause mass harm then such a punishment may be required.

We're a bit too early for video or anything, so it's hard to charge somebody for possessing painted CP. If they did, though, you'd probably be thrown into forced labour for 5 years or so.

There is no specific crime called "grand theft auto", however stealing a car would be treated like any other theft: Six months to five years jail for the first offence, and amputation of your hands if it's a repeat offence. Additional punishment would apply if it was a carjacking or assault.

Well the kidneys shouldn't be directed there, if it was an accident then a small fine if there is sufficient negligence, but otherwise no punishment so long as the kidneys were obtained from willing donors and the donation if part of a transfer of organs for medical reasons. If they were obtained illegally then time dilation prison and possible simulated capital punishment, followed by rehabilitation.
