billion. While the exact extent of their territory would be very hard to determine, their civilisation spans over 1200 universes - given that their population wouldn't quite cover an entire planet, I'd imagine their population density is infinitesimally small.

Occitania is a nation that takes the place of France and parts of Spain, which survived the Black Death more successfully, had a more or less bloodless revolution, and is home to both a constitutional monarchy and many world heritage sites.

France and Prussia both exist as a kingdom and are both ruled by women despite the fact that both countries followed a particular form of succession law that outright forbade women from holding a crown. Also, Italy is ruled by "Queen Anchovy". Also, I really wanna see a map of their universe.

They have a population of about 10 billion, going by GDP stats. Quite a lot for a single planet, not so much for 1200 universes. But given that I've nagged them about their population and GDP a few times by now, I'll state something else: The "Bunker Age" of Titanuma took place after the culmination of the Resource Wars in which five nuclear bombs completely destroyed all life above ground and left the planet an irradiated wasteland populated solely by bacteria for a million years. During this time, the people who would later become the Coryans lived in the eponymous bunkers, and developed technology to eventually terraform the planet and produce clean energy.

Unlike in our timeline, their version of the French Revolution was considered by most to be bloodless. Along with this, their modern legislature (which is called a parliament) is not based on the Westminster system but seems to (at the very least OOCly) inspired by the Republican Governments of the Americas

The time is set in the medieval era and the nation is based in Jerusalem. The people appear to be some weird Greek Scot hybrid. They apparently fought a civil war because people were depressed due to an alcohol shortage in the nation.

Kractero's territory is highly spread out across the world, covering parts of the Arabian Peninsula, India, and the East Indies. For this reason, it has a very high degree of biodiversity, being one of seventeen countries classified as "megadiverse" and existing within three different ecozones, and it has taken fairly significant measures to preserve its biodiversity through protective legislation directed at native endangered species.
