The Province of Aztlán has a flag that's in tune with the FSNA's colors but using New Mexico's design; also the namesake of the place derives from the supposed homeland of several ethnicities belonging to the Yuto-Aztecan linguistic family.

One of the most popular theories to why Nekos as a race are a thing is surprising: Ancient civilizations performed genetic modifications on ancient humans, which would have turned them into nekos.

EDIT:

AN: North American Phonetic English is apparently based on those dialects which pronounce "phonetic" with a fully eclipsed vowel in the first syllable, creating a cluster of /f/ and syllabic /n/ (I'm on mobile so I can't do IPA right now). It'd be interesting to see how NAPE deals with differences in accent and dialect within north America

The fact that the Blacks make up 94.66% of the population and from the unfinished bits, it would seem that there has definitely been more wars and conquests. I am particularly interested about how Bera Controversy and Cessions will go about.

And also that even their prehistoric people likes to drink quite a lot.

The Democratic Socialist Republic of Karevka (DSRK) is supposed to be a stand-in Soviet Union, although with major differences like the allowance of private business (But the state is a partial owner) or the fact that they allow LGBT marriage. Kind of alternate history or alternate universe I guess.

"As North America is home to numerous distinct English dialects, NUFÎ spelling can naturally change - sometimes drastically - depending on geography. In order to mitigate the issues caused by this, a standardized dialect has been created for the purposes of official documents, national media, literature, etc. This standardized dialect is designed to be as easily legible to as many anglophone North Americans as is humanly possible. Unless otherwise stated, all NUFÎ text in this factbook can and should be assumed to be in the standardized dialect."

Basically, NUFÎ changes depending on the dialect of the user, but a standardized dialect is used for most nationwide affairs

What I found out: That apparently they seceded from UK, just like IRL, but with a figurehead monarchy instead - while idea of a Washington being a king, for an example, isn't completely outlandish, it would still probably not end well. Also, they somewhat own Mexico, and Canada as well - I could understand, that they would grab Mexico, but Canada... Wouldn't Brits get in their way in this case?

Yes, the wound badge is awarded to servicemen and servicewomen who have been wounded in combat by the enemy. RL examples include the American Purple Heart and the German Verwundetenaabzeichen (wound badge).

The people in a workplace come together to elect a representative to the local soviet, the representative votes based on an imperative mandate set by the workers they represent, and are recalled from their post once their mandate expires. This system is also applied to all elections throughout the nation, creating a system of de-facto direct democracy.

Partially inspired by the Third Odyssey mod for EU4, this nation is essentially a Byzantine successor state in South America that has fused together Ancient Greek Religion with Greek Orthodox Christianity. It mixes the aesthetic of Byzantium and Ancient Greece, with very open and liberal social values but with an Imperial Monarchy. NS stats are referenced but are not strictly followed to a T.
