Not a crime but you will be questioned as to how you accomplished it, and steps taken to make sure it never happens again. No harm, no foul, but you will get a stern reprimand. President Bus Hamilton-Two Bear loves pranks and practical jokes.

Also, you will probably get an invite to go on your own personal snipe hunt with President Hamilton-Two Bear out at the old homestead in Big Muddy One (our equivalent of the US Marine One helicopter transport). Don't accept it, as Bus has a history of taking people snipe hunting and leaving them 50 km from the nearest sign of civilization.

Would be arrested for animal cruelty, however the case would most likely be immediately dismissed due to the very odd circumstance and you'd be free to go as if nothing ever happened, that is if there is clear proof the dog did attack you first. You'd get weird looks at most.

It depends on the dangerous item. With a permit, obviously no crime. Selling a cigarette to a friend is fine. selling a gun isn't. This is too vague to give a more concrete response.

Pirating a movie and selling it.

Surprisingly, citizens can buy out retired tanks from as recently as 1990 that work perfectly well! However the punishment is the taking away of their tank as government property and either deportation or death.

It'd be a cut and dry case, Terrorism, usage of Chemical Weaponry with intent to harm, and Treason. Somewhere from 30 years to life, hell even death if it was used.

Apprehended and questioned to determine the lawfulness of his actions. If a mixed war was properly declared and filed with the county or canton clerk of record after governmental waste, fraud, or abuse was substantiated but not properly addressed in a timely manner, not a crime. If the perp is just being a jerk, arrested for unlawful use of a martial weapon (a felony and 3 years hard labor) and charged with whatever other crimes committed -- for example: if someone was killed, then the death penalty.

AN didn't post a crime but the punishment would probably be death considering how awfully often Garmageddon throws around the death penalty.
