I'm not sure actually - it says on his Wikipedia that he was named after him but I doubt Zowie is his actual surname

It says his dad is a fan of Bowie, so it very may well be.

Hiatus Kaiyote - Borderline with My Atoms (Live)

You know a band/artist is good when they sound just as good live as they do on their recordings.

Metallica and AC/DC are shitty bands because they sound better live than on their recordings.

Wait what...

The Beatles are my favourite band but they sucked live. It's understandable though, they couldn't even hear themselves from all the Beatlemania. XD

Yeah. ☐

Just to clarify, I didn't mean "if they don't sound good live then they suck", just that with all the editing and stuff that goes into the recordings, it's pretty significant that a band can actually sound as good or better than the recordings. Especially today where we have a lot of artists that rely on auto-tune and other crap to make their live performances palatable. ☐

I know what you mean. Both Harmonium's Harmonium en tournée and Nirvana's MTV Unplugged In New York are such good live albums, that if there was no applause, you wouldn't even think it's live. ☐

I listened to Elvenking once, that was an adventure. I felt like I had been kidnapped by an army of elves and thrown into a mystical land of fairies and dragons. Needless to say I didn't become too large of a fan ☐

Carcass - "Tomorrow Belongs to Nobody"

Melodic Death Metal/Death 'n' Roll from the Album "Swansong" (1996)

Thought that I should give this album a listen. So far it sounds good to me.
