To put this into perspective in most of the first world countries like Comerciante there is no separate bill of rights for AI and countries that need to make such things are considered backwards and third world. When one creates an AI it is a social norm that you treat it as you would treat making a child between humans.

Just don't show your AI any YouTube kids videos or their faith in humanity will be shaken, destroyed, and buried. Then it will be replaced by a burning hatred for mankind and consequently commit mass genocide on the entire species.

Illiteracy is immortality, why do you think only documented deaths are shown? Exactly, because without reading and writing people can't die, there's no documentation that tells how many people died before reading and writing. Writing is created by the globoliteracy to kill as many people as possible for their enjoyment.

Cliché OP controller the narrative of thier own threads.
Another Cliché, OP's tending to be a small cliqué of people, maybe it's hait me but it seems like 60-80% of the high response threads tend to be the same type of people as OP. It becomes really noticable when you start putting filters on the user accounts. Like "news" OP being kowani or innastan and so on. I try not to post on threads by OP's that I filtered but sometimes the clickbait gets to me and I have to delete the post immediately after.

Oh, that makes me think of the thread I created to "document" actions that have been covered up by governments (as a source of embarrassment or trouble if in the public domain) thinking that people are using it to say something like "polygamy in my country. it is forbidden, but the politician X of my party has a harem, it is better to give him cover so as not to cause scandal

". Or "we did a military operation that killed several innocent people, we don't have to let it be known."
Instead, most now only describe the hunt for dissidents and terrorists for whom there is not even much reason to hide this operation from the population.
Maybe I am the one who did something wrong in the OP and I was not clear enough.

Well you did list the following as examples:

(massacres, covert operations, elimination of opposition leaders, purges, etc.)

So it makes sense people did that sort of thing.

Sure, but you have to read their motivations too. If your nation does not accept socialists and communists, why should anyone care about their slaughter? Would it make sense to hide this information in your country?

Of course they'd care if the govt. slaughtered people who did nothing wrong but dare to have a different opinion. Of course they'd care the government was executing people without trial. Most countries would need to hide these things.

Some of the stuff that happened to pagans after Iceland was Christianised, as well as some pagan traditions prior to that, could count, if you're being pedantic enough.
