Um....fast "R3B3L GURL" pop is not punk...

Why?

Lazy Generation - The F-Ups

Punk music is always clearly influenced by other Punk music. You can hear the Refused in United Nations. You can hear the Bad Religion in Rise Against. Even in the poppiest Pop Punk bands, say Fall Out Boy's first couple albums for example, you can hear the influence of artists like the Descendants and the Hardcore scene that band came from. Avril Lavigne played a sped up version of what Pop artists like Gwen Stefani and Brittany Spears and the like were already doing, with a Punk image and the minimal inclusion of guitars and drums, not with any significant influence from Punk music itself.

Short answer: If it sounds less Punk than Paramore, it's not Punk.

I really like music. A lot.

Some of her songs are undeniably pop punk such as Sk8ter Boi.

Also, I am not much of a fan of Paramore.
