Fascism is the modern states national and natural immune response to unchained capitalism and subversive Marxist ideology.

I'll do both.

Astoria: their society has a great deal of racial diversity and equality.
San Montalbano: they don't seem to have a primary banner, so I'm guessing their people are known for being indecisive. I did get a few recurring ones while spamming F5 which seem to suggest pristine beaches and old European towns.

Edit: nevermind, they have one now. They have a rich history, and show great respect to their significant historical figures.
