It is however, drawn like an underage character would look. I'm pretty non-chalant about drawings myself, but even I can't overlook that it looks like a fricking minor in a stripperesque outfit. It would be simply the better choice to remove it and get a better character portrait that doesn't look like it comes from that kind of material.

I never thought a forum where people make one-liner replies to "Based on the ANs flag, what's the AL's reaction to man" could cause so much drama.

The artist you commisioned for it drew him like he draws underage characters (And even regularly draws them in NSFW situations, but that is on them). It's really not that complicated.

It is better for all involved if you remove it, learn from it and get a better picture from a better artist that draws him as the serious character you seem to want Ariel to be, instead of a Twink drawn by someone who thinks Pederasty is the best.

You really don't have to associate with that, come on.

"Keeping really unkosher artwork of a character drawn by a porn artist in the style that artist uses for minors" is an extremely foolish hill to die on, there are far better ones.

For the first part, I always like to remind people - draft, draft, and draft even more. You got an idea? Type it down! It doesn't have to be too detailed, just enough for you to remember and pick up where you left off.

Trust me, there are times when you have this wild and crazy idea, then you never wrote it down, and it get sidelined by other ideas and got lost, or you only have a very vague idea of what your idea was.

"Keeping really unkosher artwork of a character drawn by a porn artist in the style that artist uses for minors" is an extremely foolish hill to die on, there are far better ones.

I could tell you that the artist likes to draw short but appropriately aged males, and then dive further into detail about it. But that would be wasting time, nobody finds ground on the internet. Everyone is stuck with their head in the ground. And honestly, drop that "that this isn't a hill to die on" I'm not dying on any hill. Let's be clear and throw that out of the window into unexpected passersby down below.

This conversation will get nowhere, besides more accusations without visible proof. My earlier statement of the artist is just what I've personally seen, and they're very well could be stuff I haven't noticed. That has happened and is known by many who have interacted with me. I will admit that I was wrong about what I've seen about the artist, when shown the briefcase. But that shouldn't justify me taking the fall for the sins of another person when I have no intention to indulge in such vile things.

Overall, I have made a compromise to UIA to appease both parties and return to normal before this circus even entered the town. I'm currently waiting for the decision on it, and wondering if all this seriousness was actually legit, and not just an ulterior motive as I've previously expected.

You really just shouldn't have commissioned something that could even remotely have been looked at as pseudo-child porn.

If you don't intend to take the fall for the artists fuck up that's fine with me. Just drop that picture and the matter is resolved. It kinda seems anyhow that you got tricked by that artist and they gave you a picture of a minor when you didn't commission that.

Don't commission from NSFW artists in general.

Why would you ever commission art from a porn artist unless you were malicious or unapologetically horny?

Perhaps so. In any case, I've changed the image as I value being part of a community than being without one. So I hope everyone returns to normal and no grudges are held.
