“Well, he does hit some of the marks of a good leader... Save for the forced conversion thing. Like, why? But anyways, I love his style! Indeed, he is a capable warrior and a king, rightfully gaining his place through combat... Though I question his views. Statism? Who the hell even subscribes to that cheap junk! It's trash! All of it! Burn it all! In fact, what if I could do him one better, a trial by combat, him against me, I'm certain I'd win the throne if I manage to destroy him and his fireteam or escorts in combat! HA! Yes! A fitting end for a king who at first seemed fit, but now that my mind has opened up again, I suppose he is just another weak, spineless sack of lies and slander who gloats about their legendary status, parading it around while the country is pulled into a state of feudal madness! Madness, I tell you! I suppose he may have even subscribed to the idea of insanity... But he's stuck in a loop. Ah, at least he'll have himself to talk to.

Oh, and did he just condemn Onox for killing innocents? It's like Chikatilo calling out Ted Bundy! For being a serial killer! Either way, this Dobrosławski is more like... "Laura... Laura... Laura. Look, we are similar, but also different. We both are warriors, but I prefer ideology and idealism over bloodshed, I don't believe in forcing anyone to serve to get certain rights, and I'm definitely against use of chemical weapons. After all, it's more environment friendly and humane to blow enemies up with artillery, shoot enemies full of lead and beat them to pulp with warclubs in a manly manner. I don't know her thoughts of me and if we will get along or not, but I agree with her on Borzywoj matter. So far, I will wait for a feedback from her about us, and then plan policies according to Gonswanza around this. After all, it's logical, that we can't trade if she is negative about us for example. So, let's just quickly draft several plans on a napkin for most likely scenarios and take one, that fits the most once we receive the feedback. I still disapprove her use of chemical weapons." -Overboss Shawn Bjomson

I wish I'd had this guy on my side during the Battle of the Imperial Palace. I know there wasn't really a realistic way for me to escape an Imperial Hawking torpedo with a blast radius of 100 kilometers, but the sheer coolness factor of this guy and his team might have made the escape possible. Actually, now that I think about it, with his help I could have put an end to the Empire and freed my people from tyranny in 10 years or so. I can't go back in time and recruit him unfortunately.

A man I don't know much about, but what I know from him is quite impressive. A man of the sciences to be sure; Maddenburg College is quite a grand place to learn the world. And with his knowledge and experience, especially with his role as commander of the KMS Segvansburg, I suspect he will do wonders for his Kaiserreich, even if he only took power only recently. I most truly wish you luck Freidreich in keeping peace in your lands and continuing your legacy.

John Mercer... is quite an interesting man. However, I truly cannot say he is of good values though. He commonly practiced in the horrible act of gambling, and has mercilessly tricked people and let his comrades die. He seems like a smart fellow in order to master plan his uprising, but he used his intelligence and skills in such horrible ways. I truly see not a leader of piety, but a gambling fool who hides from danger and seeks to gain profit only, committing the terrible sin of greed. I truly hope for John to repent for his actions in his past and possibly turn a new leaf.

"I hate him but love him. Well not love him. But he just seems strange to me. His rise to power seems interesting, I will inspect our databases soon. The time he existed in seemed turbulent for his nation. Now I looked at his policies and I must say, they are interesting. He seems to support the growth of his nation in a rapid fashion. I fail to understand why he was against a few civil rights. Granted past Rogue River was perhaps the worst in the 1960s. But back to their leader. He got really unlucky and crushed when he attempted a colonial empire, shame he lost the navy, he also, started hallucinating, talking to voices. I guess all that stress did him in."

"Henry Grant is about as interesting as watching a plastic bag blowing in the artificial wind in Rapture. His life story could easily be written for anyone with just a few words being switched for whatever lifespan or career that person was going down at that time. His policy is bland, and narrow-minded while the military is important, you shouldn't be putting your eggs in one basket. You need to spread out the budget to invest in other sectors of your government and society as a whole, even when some of those sectors are not as significant as others. But trust me, you will reap the benefits when your subjects see you are at least supporting one of their concerns to affect their lives for a decent tomorrow. Otherwise, your lifestyle is too pompous, simplify it, and aim to make yourself appeal as the everyman, instead of flaunting your wealth. However, that doesn't mean you shouldn't flaunt some of it, but make it reasonable like what you are doing by having an armoured escort to protect yourself, and not flaunting on perfectly good vehicles that'll just use as decoration for your yard, and not really used to get from place to place.

Overall, Grant is an alright fella, he has ways to go in making strategic decisions in keeping your assets happy and remaining in power."

Let's see... Andrew Ryan: What kind of name is "Andrew Ryan" for a BELARUSSIAN? That's gotta be the most not-Belarussian name I've ever heard, god dam. My name might be really bland but at least it's inline with my culture. This man sounds like the stereotypical naïve Ayn Rand worshipper who thinks the world would be a paradise if we got rid of "those evil moochers" who are somehow moochers despite building all his stuff. I've heard of these foolish libertarian utopias before, how the hell you managed to break the usual mold of total disaster is quite the achievement indeed. I'll at least give him credit for that. Also, he understands Washington about as well as a tea leaf understands its place in the East India Company. I found it hilariously ironic that even this complete fool had to accept the necessity of authoritarianism during the civil war. Never lecture me about "Wah! Adrian Green is an evil bad tyrant!" ever again. Even that wasn't enough to stop him from getting killed. Good riddance, man. Rip on me all you want for being a commie, a conspiracy theorist, a warmonger, or whatever empty insult you can lob at me, at least I can say I did my part to free the human race from actual goddam tyranny and was never naïve about it. They had to kill ME with their fancy-shancy black hole bombs after I'd already killed that b##### Carter. You know who the real damn parasite is? People who care nothing of their country or nation, and who view the collective with such disdain they would never do a single honorable thing for it in their lives. These people are moochers who enjoy their power and wealth off the backs of we who fought, and all they do is spit on us patriots. Millions fought and died throughout human history for their people, and when you put the pieces together, they really died for themselves. Are we to completely disregard their life journeys?"

"Truly, it has been a while since I have had the pleasure... Or perhaps moreso, mispleasure as it often entails to witness the description of another character, ones of which claim to be from locations across Hyrule that simply do not exist. Though I may not know how I may receive the texts as to read of said people, I may only say that I shall attempt to decipher and going forward, describe them during times when I may not have much to do...

As such, I would suppose that Hylia herself has blessed you, sir Francisco Franco that I may find the time to do the such for yourself.

To begin with, you seem to wish to use terms that simply may not exist, or otherwise the description of which does not seem to be from your own hands. I would need clear explanation for the colloquialisms that do not exist within Hyrule, take for instance

President, or Galicia, perhaps even America and Spain. I would assume the latter is of which describes locations, though I have not witnessed any places within the lands that are referred to as such. I will admit, there is little sense that the description on yourself of which makes sense, though for your own sake I shall attempt to continue, ignoring all the points of which do not give understanding.

As to begin, you would serve in the American navy, as you describe... which the old predecessors which had lived within an Independent Spain. The commitment to honour your old ones by continuing their legacy is worth so worthy of compliment, especially so that they had passed away tragically during an invasion by the Americans which had then integrated your lands as their own. However, this is how I become dissatisfied, Francisco. Just as the Knight had done for Hyrule, a force that Hylia willing would be worthy of complete extermination, the Americans invaded, and successfully occupied your lands, toppled the rulers of which had justification for continuing to be the inheritors of your lands, and yet you would never attempt to fight against the injustice of the Americans. Never would you have worked with your potential compatriots to banish an evil. I understand you had been a mere child at the time, however such a scar should have stayed with you, such an injustice remembered as to fight against...

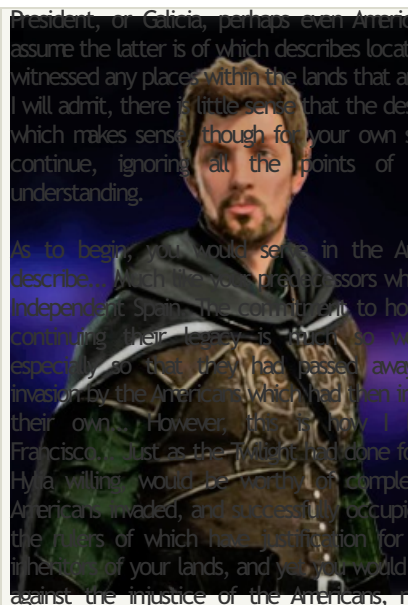

Rather, you hand your honour to the force that had conquered your comrades and your lands and serve as a fighting member of their forces? Either you are weak, unwilling to risk your own life to achieve the right thing, or you are a fool that had been manipulated by the forces that conquered. Either are awful prémonitions.

Matter of factly, you had licked the boots of the conquerors to such a high degree that you became leader eventually... That is what I have to assume you would mean with the title of "President", though as aforementioned, a definition would have been preferable... If this had been an elaborate scheme to destroy your enemy from within, then I would compliment you. However, you had not brought ruin to America and liberated your ancestral lands from their grasp, but instead served them fealty... During "Vietnam" you had brought that realm to ruin. Perhaps this had been a release against others to mask your own wrongdoings, perhaps?

I wish I could comment on your life, however yet again the description makes little sense... As such, I shall conclude.

I come away from this description, Francisco with a reminder... You are the person of which I would rather anything else but to turn into. You have no honour, and no dedication to doing the right thing, that being the liberation of your homeland and the destruction of those who had wronged the Spanish, as you claim for them to be...

Goodbye, Francisco... May Hylia forgive you for how you had acted, for should we ever have the displeasure of meeting, I would not.

The Princessdom of Hyrule

The Princessdom of Hyrule. A fanfiction based on the Legend of Zelda :: Twilight Princess that takes place half a decade after the conclusion of the game. A new caste of Hyruleans, no less the newly built army resent the old Guard and Princess-Sovereign Zelda for the surrender of the realm to the Twilight and the weakness of Hyrule from invasion...

Meanwhile, the Zora worry greatly about the militarization of Hyrule, and the Goron less so due to the Economic stranglehold of the Rupee of which they have as leverage.

"Soa... You punk are from a different version of the... post-twili war young hyrule... If that sheet I have here is correct. And damn... What a mouthful your name is. People of your era seemed to have weird tastes when it comes to names, but here is what I think about ya.

Frankly, your a weird one and I can't really get a good read on ya. I think you are one of those 'loyal to an ideal of their nation, but not to the real one' kinds of dudes and that I find to be... Really damn silly.

You seem similar to those snobs of the tetrarchy in your goals, these guys apparently slaughtered/banished their royal family a while ago, all in order to establish a more controllable state. On the one hand, backstabbing some snobby royals is pretty neat, on the other though, this likely ends in some new dumb pointy-finger system. And you can shove that up your buttocks. Go let yourself be pelted by some octaraks or something, feck off.

Speaking of Octaraks, did you fricking get rid off those!? Oh man, you are on my shit list now, Alpaca. Count your prayers to that former goddess, cuz' if I ever get my hands on you... I'll make ya chow for them in order to reincrease their populations in your land. Mark my words!"

"While there is benefit in causing damage to achieve one's own ends. Unfortunately, Rippon has no meaningful goal in sight besides short-term satisfaction before moving on to the next meaningless pleasure. Adding to the overall fact, not just being a criminal and not to criticize her from that as I was once one. It is that she is the stereotypical crook with no vision and adding to the wound, she has magic, but does nothing significant with it. In conclusion to this waste of potential, my stance is negative."
