"I am slightly confused about this man's realm; he is the leader of a...store? How can a store be a nation? Is he some type of merchant prince? Oh, I suppose it does not matter. It is very admirable that he was able to rise up from the peasantry to become a ruler; it is something that is not often seen in my kingdom. He shows high compassion for his people and the desire to see his nation succeed and tries to ensure the integrity of his people. I believe him to be an admirable man"

"Ah, the Good Guy in the Suit. There aren't many of those types in the entertainment world. It's always someone like Arthur Slick or a lesser equivalent of him playing the bad, oppressive, greedy, and power-hungry businessmen. It is indeed that WonderMart decided to take a different rope and play to be more grounded and realistic when writing a fictional company. I approve of it, very much. And you my good sir, get that stamp of approval. You do what can to fight for the floor cleaners and make their miserable lives, amazing lives. At the cost and risk to your profitable position in the company. It would be neat to have an Author and a character sit down at a tea shop, and have a chat. I bet through you, I can get your Author to tell me any future plans he has for you. If he is allowing, of course."

-His Grace, Brapture, Lord of the Alkdorverse

"A character that descends from the Heavens like they were Jesus Christ or something. A unique concept, indeed. I'm loving the pixel art too, I say the writer is a big fan of pixel art and games that use it. Although I can't help but criticize that Olive's life is too easy, not many obstacles to define her as a character. She wins too easily and comes to the picture as a flawless character. A Mary sue me might call it. But I wouldn't it, it's close. But she isn't there yet. The writer is still trying to build her as a character and takes time too. So I won't make an issue of it. It took me a while to get what I have today so I won't be an Elitist about it. That's just a waste of time and energy. Overall, Olive is an interesting character, lots of potentials. I look forward to seeing where the writer takes it."

"Going through this dossier which includes his origins and his beliefs, 'Brapture' sounds very young to be a Lord oddly enough. I see he does hate to be forced into interactions, I cannot blame him for I too loathe being forced into conversations believe it or not. However, social interactions are beneficial to a person's personal development, so I encourage this Brapture will get himself involved by interacting with others who are positive influences with a positive attitude. Most of the time people become embittered by negative influences and increasingly resentful when they grow old."

"And out of everyone from that empire, Brapture is, in a way, in control of his own and self-aware of his attitude than the Emperor himself."

"An Emperor from boyhood to adulthood, and an impressive one at that. He has earned my respect for his demeanor and enlightened, just rule. He is not without faults, however, and is rather short-sighted on social issues. But he was remembered as a great ruler all the same and in that I would agree. Wherever his soul has gone I trust it is in peace under the watchful eye of his god."

News: Days after the coronation of Queen Rose I, fifteen Senators have mysteriously vanished after returning to the Capital from a conference in Christine City. Among them is Phillip "Fighting Phil" Paddock, the Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who at 98 is the eldest member of the current Senate. President Hinterland issued a short statement of support, joined by Her Majesty the Queen, as the government has executed a number of orders to prioritize the search for the Senators.

"Ross is another example of a leader that cares about her nation more than her party... well she is an independent so there is no party to care about. She tries to maintain the nation's unity and prevent political polarization by giving government jobs to multiple different parties and her economic standpoint is what I call common sense, this is coming from a socialist by the way, she frees up the market but at the same time makes anti-monopoly laws so that her capitalism doesn't devolve into corporatism. She puts her nation first but at the same time improves relations with other nations. Now what does being anti-drug mean? that could mean anything really so I'm not sure what to say about that.

Overall, great leader that isn't trying to rival ideological edginess with 15 year old teens and rules by common sense."

A common sight when creating a character such as her, it reminds me when I was crafting Victor. Although I wouldn't call the early moments of his life to be rather pleasant but just relatively close, just before I morphed his path to what he is today. Nevertheless, Reo is a champion and deserves much praise. For the writer was far kinder to forge her legacy than I was to my creations. But that is out of the fact, that there can only be so much light before the dark emerges and ensure a set balance. A yin and yang if you may, neither is greater than the other. Overall, I am pleased."

Yeah which is why I use the term Sherechian Ba'athism, so instead of the unification of Arab states, it's the unification of the Sherechian states since prior to 1918 we are a bit shattered.

For one, despite some of the ideologies and politics that you hold, you seem to be quite a kind person. After all, it is often the nature of ourselves to look at something beyond politics. Anyway, I love that you are all for the family, because of the old saying: Blood is thicker than water, and all of that. Sure, there are times when your family tries to kill you, but for yourself, seems like everything is in order. Your selflessness is also something that I really applaud, and being sociable also helps. And hey, maybe you can cook up a large meal for me sometimes. I must warn you, you will need a lot of ingredients! For now, I am leaning on neutral but slightly positive. It's a genuine pleasure to meet you.

Pretty lovely! I do am sympathetic of what you and your twin sister have gone through, along with the damage and atrocities caused by those around you. "Ah, Valentine. The big friendly giant that is seemingly incapable of holding any petty grudges. It is indeed a shame. Not many people are like that. Particularly when it comes to political disagreements. Just shows you how immature our kind still is. But then, I am also in the guilty party and it's best not make myself to a high mighty art thou hypocrite. Since I'm still pouring fuel onto the fire in my dimension, just because it's fun and it keeps me warm at night. Overall, the character is nice. Certainly a unique concept in the NS Community. I do remember a smaller scale concept, it was created by an Author called Kirkland. I think, and the protagonist was a neko who loved candy and ruled over candy people. It was very cute and fun. It's a shame he's not here anymore. I hope he's doing well. Oh, getting off topic again. My bad. Hmm, yeah...I lost my train of thought. However, I'll just conclude with a question, Val do you plan on taking your giant country to the stars?"

"Brapture is a fool and a mockery to his kind. If other supposed "all-powerful" entities exist as his kin, they must be embarrassed by his crass and unusual behavior towards his own creations as well as violating what must be a law to keep oneself hidden. For certain, no such entities have been detected by even Trifexian standards in our continuum, and if they do exist, they are far kinder and more merciful than him."

"Be as it may, I agree on some parts of his philosophy. We do not control our destinies. It all must end eventually. I have seen my death a thousand times, and in each one my progeny takes my place and guides the people I once stood vigil over to a Unity unseen by any before or after its coming. Whether or not there is an omnipotent "author" pulling the strings of it all, I do not care. If this is to be, then I cannot do anything. And if there is not, I still cannot do anything. If such an entity exists, then I am thankful for their creation of a universe where few suffer for no reason. If they don't, then my existence is merely an object of coincidence, but ultimately it does not matter, and I do not care."

"And I suppose that's a reflection of my opinion of this supposedly omnipotent god-creator. I do not care. If he is omnipotent, then he is a cruel and merciless being who only does what he does to satisfy some twisted fantasy. If he isn't, then it is merely another deified being who is merely a man. Whichever the case, he poses neither good nor evil towards the Federation or her people, and therefore, I am ambivalent to this self-proclaimed "god".

"He isn't much of a talker, as dictated to him by his creator. His life is mundane, uninteresting, un-entertaining in my regards. I would prefer more liveliness to add to his background to make it more tragic, go into the detail of why and how he became a Tyrant. As it currently is seen that he awoke one morning and decided to rule with an Iron-fist. Much favour, much favour need to add, but rushing to it would ruin it. The creator should do as all do, wait, until the sparks aligned before igniting the manifestation."

Brapturing is deciding whether to write or not...
He has decided to write. Be honoured.

"His life is the average tale for some mortal heads. His life was a rebellious one, instead of taking a successful pathway. He took the opposite and became the head of a small-time crime organization. Afterwards, he eventually cleaned his act up and resulting in him becoming the Sar of Shuraya. Developing a Napoleon complex if it is the right mortal word for it. That his race shares greatly but enhanced to a higher degree based on his past life. That he confidently insults lesser species to show off his grandeur, even though he was almost on the road to complete destruction. Always a fascinating tale to see creators take for their creations."

"Understand this. You may think you're an absolute idiot. But remember, there are folks out there who are a LOT more idiotic than yourself."
"The world is an angry place, getting madder and madder every waking moment of our pitiful existence. So let's all just put on our clown shoes and laugh at it."

He is a great Asrau, but if you ask me if Arslan will grace the top of the my list of all-time best leaders one day, I would have to say yes. He has always strived for his dream, and I hope that he can live up to it, one day. I will miss him, but I also know that an equivalent of his dream is within my grasp, if I will just work hard and reach his level.
