Hey Corrian, this not your taste?

Maybe this isn't either?”

I think I like the first one more.

I haven't really listened to much of Nightwish. Of what I've heard, I was kind of just eh on them, but both songs you posted I like more than any other Nightwish song I've heard, so I may like some of their stuff.

Either way, you introduced me to Porcupine Tree, and now they are one of my favorite bands ever, along with me loving a lot of the stuff Steven Wilson does (singer of Porcupine Tree) that I've heard so far. So I thank you for that. If you want, I can even send you some of it if you haven't heard any of his stuff.

Ah, Swans is quite nice.

As for Steven Wilson. I got all his stuff, and I like the other bands he's in. And I found some unreleased/bonus songs here and there too.(Bands other than PT; No-man, Blackfield, I.E.M., Bass Communion, as well as the stuff he did himself- Insurgentes, Grace for Drowning, Storm Corrosion, and I've heard some of the stuff he's doing now). So yeah, I've managed to get the rest of my family into Nightwish, as they did with PT to me. Also some of the stuff that Tarja(former lead singer of Nightwish who left in 2005, though she's also a pianist) does on her own isn't that bad, either.

Nice, so you are ahead of me. I did listen to Steven Wilson's solo work, which was great, all of Blackfield, and Storm Corrosion, but I haven't listened to much of No-Man, I.E.M, or Bass Communion yet. Porcupine Tree, and Steven Wilson in general, is one of those artists I wish was more popular, because they clearly got talent. And Steven Wilson would really deserve the popularity, since he's a great musician who's obviously full of ideas. I mean geez, he's working on another solo album already, did Storm Corrosion not long ago, might be working on a new Porcupine Tree album, might be doing another Blackfield album....yeah, he's a busy guy with lots of ideas.

Porcupine Tree-Anesthetize.

Do you know if you can find Porcupine Tree stuff at record stores? Obviously things like grocery store record areas isn't going to do me any good, because they seem to just have the popular mainstream crap. But like a real record store with many CD's. Because I'm the type that wants physical CD's, not some ITune's version as my only version. For multiple reasons. For one, someone made a good point that I thought of too, where Itune's stuff you buy has no resell value if you get sick of it. And to me, just having a physical CD is better. Besides, I'm pretty sure if you know what you are doing, you can turn the music on your physical CD into MP3's, so what's the point in buying it on itune's when you can get both a CD and it on ITune's? And once I actually pay for Spotify, it won't matter anyway, because that just lets you play all the stuff on Spotify on your phone (when I get a cellphone, that is), and your local files if I recall.

Not quite sure if you can get a physical copy of PT albums other than from the internet(either ordered, or just downloaded off certain websites for free, where you could either put them on your phone, or burn onto a disk) easily.

I would probably go for one of the internet options. Ordering, if you want to be honourable.

Yeah. I'll check stores at some point. And if that doesn't work, I'll just order it. It's not like I have money to just throw away right now, since the only money I have is from Holidays and birthdays. And right now I'm saving up for The Last of Us.

And yeah, I'm pretty against downloading anything for free, so I'm definitely going to support the band when I can. Especially a band like that that isn't that popular, and probably actually needs the money, unlike some bands that make plenty of money from their albums. Spotify's perfectly legal, so I don't feel guilty with that. And it has tons of music on it, so I really enjoy it. But still, there are a fair amount of albums I want physical copies of, even if I will pay the 10 dollar monthly fee for Spotify at some point.

Now this is 'Dubstep' music I can like. Not sure how much I care for this band as a whole though. The songs I've heard with them singing have been annoying in my opinion. BUT, I could hear they had talent, because they had one song that went through like, 4 different phases with variety. And this song is entirely different from anything else of theirs I've heard. But I probably can only get into their 'instrumental' stuff.

Interesting Dubstep.... Can't decide if I like it or not though.

That drum part followed by the explosive guitar part at 54 seconds always gets to me with it's epicness.

Edit: This is one of like 2 songs I'd absolutely love to hear live. I bet it sounds epic live. The other one would be Sigur Ros-Untitled 8

Song name made me think of this, but only like one line of lyrics in it....

And from the brief amount of that song I heard, it didn't really sound like my thing.
