Not a crime, there's an entire wing of warhawks in Congress calling for war against rival and not-so-rival great powers (and a larger number calling for smaller hostile actions, i.e. supporting separatist movements, etc.). Back in the Standoff at the Caribbean, there were a large number of people calling for outright war with the UK and France, for example.

The person's free speech depends on their location. If it was in private, it would probably not be a crime. In a public place however, "REVOLUTION" would probably be considered fighting words. Person would be under probation
