erm... ayverin forgot to put a /skip...

never mind, i'll just reply to pas.

pas really likes to stylize their armed forces- while they might be fond of keeping an ordered hierarchy, above a certain level they refer to soldiers in nearly mythical terms, referring to even regimental commanders in the same terminology as feudal lords. additionally, airmen are- unlike their corresponding ranks in the army or navy- called "aeroguardians."

I have learned after reading ANs factbooks that AN is a god at factbook formatting, and I wish I had even a fraction of their big brain energy.

For an actual in lore answer though, I have learned ANs lore consists of the various political entities that appeared in their region of space after the collapse of an overarching human entity called the confederacy, and now has many different powers fighting for dominance I believe.

The Thaler, which is their currency, was adopted in 1992. The modern types of banknotes and coins were introduced in 2009, so their currency came in first then the banknotes and coins came in later.

they are neither capitalist or socialist, instead they have a an extremely mixed economy (known as the Airceltrian model) with characteristics of both systems including private property and markets but also antitrust regulations, wealth redistribution, and worker's unions to make sure the workers are not exploited

I learned that Theram's minimal government was founded after the nation declared it's independence from the United States backed government after a crackdown of their civil rights! I also learned it's only military is that of paramilitary organizations.

From their factbooks:

"The nation was founded by the Rulzea, the native race of Atis, after their previous regime was crushed by many highly violent invasive species from the planet Galax. The nation unified the various disorganized regions of the world following the collapse, occasionally fracturing under the pressure of new natural disasters caused by the newly damaged nature of their planet, but always managing to return to power. The nation has even managed to unify the ancient abandoned colonies of the race, bringing the nation beyond its reaches under the new ruling power."

For Jarvikan, I have learned they only let their heirs be named Franz or Wilhem, and that they switch their flag back to their original every February 2nd, for some reason.

For Pan-Asiatic States, I found out the States follow a form of ethical codes for their citizens? Both to preserve Asian values and for the better good, I suppose.

The Original flag of Quartia and Karafuto, the so-called "Pearl of the Northeast", represented a rough map of the country. The Green circle represents Karafuto, the pink-and-blue symbol is a variant of the Korean Yaeguk, the white and green represents snow (peace) and forests (nature), and the purple represents innovativeness.

Anime Mr House

I learned that AN is a self replicating Operating system that developed a rulership complex after deciding to assist it's CEO at the end of their life, and take over the company, and later nation, after their CEO's death. I have also learned they have automated police in order to defend against those who would seek to overthrow their digital overseer.

What I learned from their factbooks is significant parts of their history, how the beginnings of their nation started as a refugee fleet that landed on Earth. Before then expanding into the wider galaxy, eventually, something tore a hole within the fabric of the universe which deposited a significant number of hostile species, nations, and planets into the Galaxy, and these forces are led by Cicatrix Dolor. These forces are often called the 'Enemy'. Now the Empire fights them whenever they can, wanting to strike the first blow and have them reeling.
